State, Treasury Clash on Narcotic Control Revision

Morgenthau Bill Would Place Bureau Under Secret Service.

Druggists, Doctors Involved in Battle

By Sidney Olson.

A bitter behind-the-scenes battle between the State and Treasury Departments, involving international treaty obligations of the United States for control of narcotic traffic, retail and wholesale druggists, drug manufacturers and the doctors of the country, was on its way to solution yesterday, The Post learned last night.

Entangled in the struggle, still continuing, are Treasury and State Department officials in a half-dozen units, the American Medical Association, the American Drug Manufacturers Association, the Federal Wholesale Druggists Association and the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives.

Representatives of foreign governments are watching the situation closely, it was understood, while the Permanent Central Opium Board, the Opium Advisory Committee of the League of Nations, and the supervisory body, all organized at Geneva under international treaties affecting all civilized nations, are following developments intently.

Facts of the Case.

The facts underlying the controversy are these:

In the Treasury, following a suggestion made by Secretary Henry Morgenthau, jr., in August, 1934, there was drafted a bill reorganizing the Secret Service to include under it all the law enforcement units now functioning separately under the Treasury. These were to include: The enforcement division of the alcohol tax unit, the intelligence division of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, the customs agency and the Bureau of Narcotics.

This bill at present is in the House Ways and Means Committee, under chairmanship of Robert L. Doughton, North Carolina, Democrat, who introduced it.

The objections to this bill stemmed chiefly from the State Department and the retail and wholesale druggists and drug manufacturers and the physicians and surgeons of the country.

The State department's objection was that the Bureau of Narcotics had been set up under an international treaty provided in the narcotics limitation convention of 1931. This bureau headed by Commissioner H. J. Anslinger, had served not only to discharge the United States' international obligation, but also as a model for similar bureaus in the 49 governments participating in the treaty, which had patterned their own organizations directly after the tremendously successful American set-up. State Department attaches asserted.

Few Violations.

Under the narcotics bureau licensing of the medical and pharmaceutical trade in habit-forming drugs, by which the supply of all such drugs is controlled from production to distribution with minutest care, violations have been found in less than one-half of 1 per cent of the total drug output. These violations have been mostly technical, such as wrong registrations, etc.

Thus the reputable side of the drug problem has been brought under almost perfect regulation, it was pointed out. The Bureau of Narcotics and the other law enforcement units concentrated therefore on the difficult and far-flung prob-

Indians Renew Vow For Tribal Suicide

Nogales, Ariz., Feb. 20 (AP).—Remnants of the once-powerful Seri Indians, dancing in barbaric hysteria about the scalp of a white man, renewed tonight their fantastic pact of tribal suicide.

In the dark of the moon the copper-skinned natives of Tiburon Island, off lower California, re-enact scenes of the days when the tribe numbered thousands.

Now numbering less than 100, the Seris, discouraged by disease and poverty, have sworn that the tribe shall die.

Their "curse on the hated white man" completed, the Indians gather about their venerable chief, Juan Tomas, and take an oath to remain childless—ringing down the curtain on one of the most barbarous tribes in North American history.

Mother Regains Albert Sardo, 8; Fly to N.J. Home

Boy, Center of Court Fight by Grandfather, Goes to Live in Asbury Park.

The love of a mother for her only son triumphed in fact last night as it had in the high courts of the law.

So 8-year-old Albert Sardo, jr., whose father was killed in an automobile accident last year and over whose custody a bitter legal battle has raged, left Washington, probably forever, holding tight in the gloved hand of his mother, Mrs. Helen Virginia Villapiano.

The two boarded a plane at Washington Airport at 5:30 p. m., and sat happily together as the big ship roared away toward Albert's new home—where his stepfather, Dr. Joseph Villapiano, and his year-old half-sister, Madeline, await him.

Earlier in the day the boy, who, during the hearing in Justice Luhring's court last spring denied he loved his mother, was brought to Mrs. Villapiano in the office of her attorney, Julian I. Richards.

Embraces Mother, Weeps.

"Hello, son," said Mrs. Villapiano, smiling and holding out her arms.

"Hello, mother," replied Albert gravely.

Then Albert and Mrs. Villapiano embraced, and Albert cried a little, as he contemplated the great adventure which impended.

At the time of Sardo's death, Mrs. Villapiano, who divorced the well-known undertaker in Reno several years ago, sought her son's custody.

She was opposed Albert's grandfather, William H. Sardo, of 412 H street northeast. When the case was tried in Justice Luhring's court, Albert said he didn't want to leave his grandfather. However, Mrs. Villapiano was awarded the child and a subsequent appeal by Sardo was denied.

Yesterday the mandate was issued for Albert's return to his mother. Mrs. Villapiano arrived from Asbury Park, where her husband has a large practice.

Assured of Playmates.

Albert was brought by his grandfather's attorney, Ringgold Hart, to the office of Richards.

Here the reconciliation of mother and son was complete.

"When are we going to Asbury Park, mother?" Albert asked.

"As soon as we can fly there, son," responded Mrs. Villapiano, smoothing her son's sandy hair.

"Will my sister Madeline be there?"

"Yes, son."

"I guess the kids in my neighborhood will miss me, mother. You know I got a G-man gun for Christmas."

"There'll be lots of toys in Asbury Park," replied Mrs. Villapiano, smiling. "There'll be the

Leave Bills Parley Called By Ramspeck

Chairman and Employes Confer Today on Acts Passed by Congress.

2 Courses Open; Conference to Harmonize Differences Favored.

Chairman Ramspeck, of the House Civil Service Committee, will confer today with representatives of Government employe organizations, before deciding what course to pursue with respect to the amended leave bills, which passed the Senate yesterday.

Two courses are open to the House and the Government employees. They may accept the Senate amendments, providing a 26-day vacation and a 15-day sick-leave, in lieu of the 30-day annual leave provided in the House bill, or they may ask for a conference, in the hope of obtaining some concessions from the Senate conferees.

Indications are that Ramspeck will take the latter course, upon the advice of the Government employe spokesmen, and will try to have the effective date of the legislation made retroactive to January 1, 1936, if not July 1, 1935. It is believed he will seek to restore the 120-day accumulative privilege, which the Senate reduced to 60 days in both the vacation and sick leave measures.

The Senate passed the leave bills without discussion, as Senator McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, had withdrawn his opposition, after the Senate Civil Service Committee adopted his amendments.

Confer With Spokesmen.

As Ramspeck will confer with spokesmen for the Government workers, the House will not be called upon to pass the bills before next week, though it may send them to conference today.

The differences in the Senate and House bills are as follows:

The House bills provide 30 days' annual leave, excluding Sundays and holidays, and 15 days' sick leave, whereas the Senate measures allow but 26 days' vacation, and the same amount of sick leave.

Government employes would be permitted to accumulate 120 days' vacation, and a similar amount of sick leave, under the House bills. The Senate amendments reduce both to 60 days.

The House bill would permit Government workers to apply overtime to their vacations, but the Senate eliminated this provision, and recommended a special study of the whole problem of overtime.

Year's Difference.

There is a year's difference in the effective date of the measures, the House having adopted July 1, 1935, and the Senate July 1, 1936. This means a difference in 15 days' vacation this year for Federal and District employes.

The Senate sick leave bill requires a certificate from a responsible person whenever an employe claims sick leave.

While the House leaves the issuance of regulations relative to vacation up to each department head, the Senate bill requires a conference and uniform action by all department heads concerned.

Employes of mail equipment shops of the Postoffice Department are included in both bills by the Senate.

Luther C. Steward, president of the National Federation of Federal Employes, indicated his desire for a conference and compromises on the bill. He said in part:

"In passing the sick and annual leave bills, the Senate has recognized that present leave conditions in the Federal service are discriminatory, and that remedial legislation is essential, not only in justice to the employes themselves, but from the standpoint of sound personnel administration.

"With the Senate, by its action

Coolidge Northampton Estate Will Be Sold

Northampton, Mass., Feb. 20 (AP).—Ralph W. Hemenway, attorney for Mrs. Grace Coolidge, said today that The Beeches, Northampton estate purchased by former President Calvin Coolidge after his retirement, is for sale.

You Can't Arrest Me!

Police, Unable to Penalize Congress Members, Put 'Courtesy' Tags on Cars of Offenders; Violations Continue.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Enforcement of local traffic regulations has given way to courteous warnings—at least in cases involving "Congressional" tag holders.

Following a story in The Post Thursday—revealing open and flagrant parking violations by members of Congress—a policeman was assigned to special duty yesterday, "tagging" illegally parked cars near the two House Office Buildings.

But in place of the regulation infraction "ticket," these cars were "tagged" with special "courtesy cards"—the same type as given to Washington visitors, total strangers who have never been here before and are not acquainted with local traffic laws.

But even this system of "tagging" Congressional cars was unusual. Residents and workers in the vicinity of New Jersey avenue and C street northwest could recall no other time in recent months when efforts had been made to curb repeated violations.

All this was revealed when The Post reporter again visited Capitol Hill to inquire into Congressional parking problems.

On a previous trip, at least a dozen flagrant violations involving "Congressional" tag holders were found.

Yesterday the number had increased. Official cars were parked in violation of virtually every type of regulation. But, unlike the first day, these illegally parked machines bore the "courtesy cards," politely warning of the infraction.

Quoting from the cards:

"The Metropolitan Police Department, Washington, D. C., welcomes you to the Nation's Capital. For your information, it is a traffic violation to—(and the offense is named).

An etching of the Capitol adorns the "courtesy card." On the back is a digest of local traffic laws.

But in the majority of cases these law-breaking lawmakers are already familiar with District regulations. They have lived in Washington for many years. They have even launched an "investigation" into local traffic problems.

But the Constitution allows a member of Congress special "privileges"—no matter how well he knows the law or how frequently he violates it, unless the offense is a felony, treason or breach of the peace, he is immune from arrest.

Defiance and wilfull disregard could be the only answer to one flagrant violation noted yesterday in front of the new House Office Building.

A car bearing Arkansas tags—in addition to a "Congressional" plate—was parked directly abreast of a fireplug. Less than a foot away was a sign reading: "No parking at any time." Had an emergency risen, the fireplug was blocked.

The driver, unless he was totally blind, could not have failed to see the plug. The law says "no car shall park within 10 feet of any fireplug." There are few motorists—whether they be members of Congress or not—

Hacksaw Operation Patient Improved

Lowell, Mass., Feb. 20 (AP).—Doctors gave John McCoy, 47, "a good chance" for recovery tonight after his right arm was amputated with an unsterilized hacksaw yesterday.

McCoy was pinned for two hours in the cab of his traveling crane against a steel girder 50 feet in the air. Dr. N. Gillmor Long had to perch perilously atop a ladder to perform a tortuous operation without an anesthetic in freezing cold.

While the 31-year-old normally right-handed surgeon sawed away with his left hand, owing to his position, he kept up a continuous conversation with McCoy.

Although his name remained on the danger list at St. Joseph's Hospital, McCoy showed "considerable improvement" in the last 24 hours, doctors said.

A bolt that snapped because of the cold caused the crane to plunge from its tracks, pinning McCoy.

Berlin Orders Protest Over Swiss Nazi Ban

Berlin, Feb. 20 (AP).—The German minister at Berne has been instructed, it was announced today, to present a note to the Swiss government strongly protesting the Federal Council's action in banning Nazi organizations in Switzerland.

The note declares the Swiss Council's decree made after the assassination at Davos February 5 of Wilhelm Gustloff, Nazi organizer in Switzerland, is inadmissable.

The German note, claiming that the ban is a "political demonstration," expresses the "expectation that the Swiss federal government's decision will be rescinded."

Four Sailors Drowned When Boat Capsizes

Wilmington, N. C., Feb. 20 (AP).—Four of the crew of the American freighter Chippewa were drowned today when a small boat in which they were returning to their ship from Southport capsized.

They were William Creech, M. Straham, P. Casey and M. Conklin.

Search was being made for the bodies by Coast Guardsmen.

U. S. Jury Refuses To Indict Milne

New York, Feb. 20 (AP).—A Federal grand jury today refused to indict Caleb Jones Milne 4th, on a charge of extortion after considering evidence presented by Assistant United States Attorney George Pfann.

Milne wrote extortion notes to his family and then was "found" gagged and tied on a road near Doylestown, Pa. He insisted for hours he had been kidnaped.

Federal agents quizzed young Milne, an unemployed actor, and obtained a confession he had perpetrated the hoax.

Milne told them he thought the publicity would help him get a stage job. His ransom notes had demanded $20,000.

Roosevelt Baby Names Complicatedly Simple

By the Associated Press.

Naming the baby is simplicity itself in the Roosevelt family, even though it sometimes sounds complicated.

The new baby belonging to the James Roosevelts, its grandmother, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, revealed today, is called Kate for its maternal grandmother; following the pattern set when its elder sister was named Sara Delano for its paternal grandmother.

The daughterly line of Anna Eleanor Roosevelts runs in well-ordered sequence, the bearer thereof being called "Anna" or "Eleanor" in alternate generations. Mrs. Roosevelt's mother was an "Anna;" she's an "Eleanor;" her daughter is an "Anna;" her granddaughter, now that the baby-nickname "Sistie" is fading into the background, is again "Eleanor."

Soviet Ship in Distress.

Baku, Transcaucasia, U. S. S. R., Feb. 20 (AP).—Steamers and airplanes searched fruitlessly today for the Soviet icebreaker Shaumian, reported in distress in the Caspian Sea with 31 men aboard. The Shaumian sent out a call for assistance yesterday and has not been heard from since.

Rankin Seeks Potomac TVA To Cut Rates

Parks, Navigation Also Included; Hearings Asked at Once.

$10,000,000 Sought as 'Starter;' Reports by Army Awaited.

By James D. Secrest.

New Deal ventures into hydro-electric power development were brought to the door of the National Capital late yesterday when Representative Rankin (Democrat), of Mississippi, introduced an extremely broad bill to set up a Potomac Valley Authority modeled after the TVA.

Although in the course of preparation for several weeks, the bill came rather dramatically on the heels of a United States Supreme Court ruling, which upheld the right of the Government to sell power produced at Wilson Dam, a phase of the TVA.

The Rankin bill is designed to develop the whole of the Potomac River. Its author said he would press for early hearings, probably before the House Military Affairs Committee.

An idea of the extent of its purpose may be seen in the title of the bill, which reads:

"For the development and improvement of navigation, sanitation, water supply, recreation, transportation and of electric power of the Potomac River and its tributaries."

Stresses Parks Navigation.

Rankin, who fathered the TVA act in the House, said the development of power is merely one of the many activities that would be carried on by the Potomac Valley Authority. He visualized the creation of beautiful parks in the vicinity of Great Falls, for instance, and the opening of the Potomac to navigation as far up the river as Cumberland, Md.

Electric rates in this vicinity would be lowered, especially in the rural areas and in sections of Virginia and Maryland where rates now are much higher than in Washington, Rankin said.

The bill carries a $10,000,000 authorization, but the Mississippian said that was just a beginning. More money will be asked, he explained, after War Department engineers submit estimates to Congress on the costs of some of the multiple projects authorized.

Study Authorized.

The PVA would be controlled by three administrators, appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate for six-year terms at salaries of $15,000 a year. Immediately upon organization, it would proceed to make a study of the Potomac River Valley and "shall determine the location of dams, power stations, water mains and appurtenant structures" and then report to Congress.

The report must include plans for "elimination of pollution from the waters of the Potomac River and its tributary streams and for the preservation of game and food fish therein, and for the development of an adequate, economical and pure water supply for the District of Columbia," and other communities adjacent to the river, and the development of navigation and the construction of bridges and through highways across the river.

Even before making the report, however, the PVA is given power to proceed with the acquisition of land and to construct and operate "any structure or appurtenant facility which it finds to be essential to the purposes of this act."

Granting the PVA the same right upheld by the Supreme Court in the recent TVA case, the bill states:

"The said authority may sell, lease or otherwise dispose of any

600 Ohio Children Ill Of Myterious Disease

Coshocton, Ohio, Feb. 20 (AP).—A mysterious disease left 500 children ill today. Coschoston schools were closed as health officials sought to determine the exact nature of the disease, said by some physicians to be intestinal influenza.

The State health department began an examination.

Dr. W. H. McMichael, Coshocton County health commissioner, said that none of the cases was serious. He ordered samples of water taken and expressed belief that last week's thaw might have contaminated the water supply.

WPA Forbids Actors To Play 'Valley Forge'

Boston, Feb. 20 (AP).—A Federal ban halted the performance of a WPA play, "Valley Forge," at Lexington tonight.

"Inasmuch as a few individuals have been led to believe the play contained offensive matter, though this is a misapprehension, I have instructed the State director to withhold the performance at Lexington," Hiram Motherwell, assistant to the director of Federal theater projects, said.

A cast of 110 unemployed Massachusetts actors first presented the play Tuesday night at Plymouth, where Selectman Charles Moning said it "isn't even fit for adults." He objected to a realistic showing of a camp follower of Colonial times as the author, Maxwell Anderson, pictured her.

McMullen Held Guilty, Is Fined By Army Court

Colonel Penalized $3,600 for Misconduct, Cleared of Bribery Charges.

A military court-martial last night found Lieut. Col. Joseph I. McMullen guilty of two charges of "dishonorable conduct" in accepting two railroad tickets as gratuities from Joseph Silverman, jr., a dealer in surplus Army goods.

The sandy-haired colonel, who has spent 40 years in the Army, did not flinch as Maj. Gen. Upton Birnie, Chief of Field Artillery and president of the court, announced the verdict.

The court, which heard the case at Walter Reed Hospital, imposed upon Col. McMullen a fine of $150 a month for 24 months, a total of $3,600; reduced him to the lowest ranking colonel of his corps and subjected him to rebuke by the Board of Review, which is equivalent to Presidential reprimand.

Col. McMullen was acquitted of the more serious charges. These alleged that he accepted the tickets for giving advice to Assistant Secretary of War Woodring that was favorable to Silverman and that the tickets were accepted as a bribe with intent to use influence with the War Department.

His conviction was on one charge that he accepted and used the tickets as a gift while he was subject to call from his superiors for advice concerning contemplated transactions with Silverman, and on a second charge that he accepted the tickets while transactions with Silverman were pending before the War Department.

Son in Court.

By Col. McMullen's side when sentence was pronounced was his son, Bruce. It was to aid the colonel in his haste to go to his son, who was gravely ill in San Francisco, that Silverman offered to get the tickets. Payment was made for the tickets, the defense counsel contended, by applying it against the purchase price of an automobile which Silverman had bought from Col. McMullen.

Evidence had been offered by the prosecution that the tickets, valued at $369.70, had been given to Col. McMullen at a time when Silverman was negotiating with the War Department for favorable changes in a contract.

The proceeding was the first public court-martial of a high-ranking officer since the late Brig. Gen. William Mitchell was tried for "insubordination" in 1925.

Automatically the case will go before the Army Board of Review. If the conviction is sustained it must be approved by the Secretary of War and President Roosevelt before it becomes effective.

The fate of Col. McMullen's Army career was placed in the Wallace Assails AAA Tax Refunds in Letter to Senator Norris.

House to Approve Soil Bill Today

Amendment to Restrict Expenditures to 500 Million Adopted.

By Robert C. Albright.

Word that the Administration's $500,000,000 farm tax proposals will be laid at the door of Congress late next week, following the President's return from Hyde Park, was received at the Capitol yesterday, as Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace delivered a hotter broadside at refund of impounded and unpaid AAA taxes to processors.

This plan tied into Administration maneuvering to hold up tax legislation at least until the new for "soil conservation" program is safely through Congress, to improve its chances in court. The farm program, already approved by the Senate, is expected to pass the House today, and will go immediately to conference. A $500,000,000 limitation on Wallace's spending power under the act yesterday was written into the bill by the House.

Wallace's new blast at processing tax refunds brought about by the Supreme Court's rice millers' decision, was contained in a special report prepared for Senator George W. Norris (Republican), Nebraska, and revived rumors that a retroactive provision for reaching some $300,000,000 in refunded AAA taxes will be incorporated in the new revenue measure.

Norris Asked Data.

Wallace recently had termed the refund "the greatest legalized steal in American history," thus precipitating a demand for his removal from office by House Republicans. Norris, who said that "steal" was too strong a word, called the refund a "gift" and asked Wallace to supply him with data.

In his report to Norris yesterday, Wallace likewise modified his epithet to "gift." Quoting from a study made for him by L. H. Bean, AAA economic adviser, Wallace said:

"The facts embodied in this report indicate that the impounded processing taxes recently ordered returned to processors rather than to consumers or producers is in the nature of an outright gift of public money to a small group that is not entitled to it. The amount involved is $300,000,000, including impounded as well as other unpaid processing taxes."

Earnings Are Cited.

Wallace insisted that the "facts" show:

"1. That the impounded and other unpaid processing taxes are far in excess of the annual net earnings of processors.

"2. That in the case of cotton, wheat and hog processors as a group, the accumulated unpaid taxes represent about three and a half times the average prosperity net profits of 1927-1929.

"3. That in the case of hog processors alone the unpaid taxes are approximately eight times their average prosperity net profits of 1927-1929.

"4. That processors by increasing their operating and profit margins during the period when processing taxes were in effect, have collected the equivalent of the impounded taxes from consumers or producers and are therefore being given money that, except for the recent court action, would have gone to the public Treasury where Congress intended it to go."

Revealed by Bankhead.

Word that the Administration's reported $500,000,000 tax program, to finance the pending AAA substitute, was given to the House by Majority Leader William B. Bankhead, who lunched with the President on Thursday.

Representative Allen T. Treadway (Republican), Massachusetts, had just predicted that the new revenue proposals would be laid in the lap of Congress just before adjournment.

"Upon what authority does the gentleman predicate that statement?" asked Bankhead.

"It has been the history of this Administration from the start to present its tax measures in time to hold up adjournments of Congress," said Treadway.

"Would it surprise the gentleman

Bandit Is Shot Down in Court As Blast Threat Causes Panic

By the United Press.

Cleveland, Feb. 20.—Clayton Clawson, one of the most desperate prisoners ever jailed here, emptied a courtroom today when he suddenly drew a tiny bottle from his shoe, stood on the witness stand and screamed he would blow everyone to "Kingdom Come."

"Duck! Run for your lives," shouted Judge Samuel Silbert. He himself was yanked from his seat by a detective and thrown into an anteroom. Jurors scrambled wildly to get out of the box. Spectators climbed over chairs and benches to reach doors. Detectives drew guns.

"Don't shoot," Clawson shouted, still holding the bottle aloft. "If you want to come up and take me, you'll all go to hell along with me."

Detectives opened fire. Clawson slumped, three bullet wounds in his body, one in his right arm. The bottle crashed to the floor. But there was no explosion. Only ammonia fumes filled the room.

"The dirty bum," Clawson gasped, "the guy who sold me that told me it was nitroglycerin."

Conducting his own defense, Clawson had just asked Judge Silbert a question when he stepped to the witness stand and drew the vial.

Detectives recalled that Clawson's "nitro" stunt was part of the technique he used in holdups.

"Suppose that stuff had been nitro," Clawson said, as an attractive blonde nurse dressed his wounds.

"Think of that dumb policeman. Why the ambulances would have been hauling dead people out of the court all day."

Clawson said he would have had only one regret had the bottle contained nitroglycerin.

"That would have been that Judge Silbert would have gone along with the rest," he said. "He's a swell guy. He gave me a break when I was up in front of him five years ago."

First Public Television Wire To Open in Germany March 1

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Feb. 20.—Service on Germany's first commercial long-distance telephone and television line will be inaugurated at the opening of the Leipzig fair March 1.

The start of communications follows extensive tests made by the federal postoffice over a cable 268 kilometers (about 247 miles) in length.

Two stations—at Berlin and Leipzig—will limit service over the new wire for the time being with accommodations provided in four booths, two at each end.

Possibilities of seeing by telephone long have intrigued the American research engineer, but the television-telephone has never gone beyond the experimental stage in this country.

One of the first tests along that line was conducted by the Bell Telephone laboratories in 1927, between Washington and New York, a distance of approximately 230 wire miles. This was a one-way setup in which President Hoover at Washington was viewed on a screen in New York.

The next step came in 1930, also under the auspices of the Bell laboratories, a two-way television-telephone over a distance of about three miles within New York City. Special booths without visible telephone equipment, but with a viewing screen and scanning apparatus were at either end.

Now plans are under way, pending the issuance of a permit by the Federal Communications Commission, for the construction of a coaxial cable between New York and Philadelphia which would be used primarily for television experimentation.

Meanwhile, most of the television research, concentrated in Philadelphia and nearby Camden, N. J., looks toward its development for radio broadcast purposes.

Recovery Chief Assails Federal Home Aid Plan

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Feb. 20.—A. S. Freed, chairman of the committee for economic recovery, in a speech today, severely criticized the Federal Government's aid to the national home building program.

In an address prepared for delivery before the North Central Building and Loan Conference and the midwinter conference of the American Savings and Loan Institute, he charged the Government's assistance has been "opportunistic, inefficient and unrelated."

"If less effort were given to 'trial balloons,' internal bickerings and charges of greed and selfishness, more attention could be devoted to the development of a carefully planned public and private home building program," he declared.

"There is growing up in Washington a carefully conceived, although fortunately, not yet executed plan, whereby the Federal Housing Administration would soon have under its supreme control, the definite power to say what materials shall go into a home, how they shall be applied, where the home shall be located, who shall do the financing, and who shall have the privilege of buying a home in this great country."

Freed said the first function of the Department of Commerce in the program should be "the aid and promotion of home building by private enterprise."

He continued: "There can be but one good reason for the continuance of the present unsound method of organization.

"It must be that the President does not share with business its confidence in the department and the Secretary, its official head.

"If this be the case, we would recommend the resignation of the Secretary of Commerce, or the legal dissolution of the department. Of course, neither of these suggestions is desirable."

Freed, who is the president of Paramount Motors Corporation, New York, designers and manufacturers of taxis, is the leader of the committee for economic recovery, which is composed of well-known corporate executives who have formed a comprehensive plan for Government, industry, finance and labor.

By the Associated Press.

Use of Reconstruction Finance Corporation facilities for a "demonstration project" to show private finance how it can make money out of handling insured home mortgages was disclosed by officials yesterday.

If the demonstration is successful, New Deal housing officials maintain private interests may take over this activity, lending new impetus to home construction.

Stewart McDonald, Federal housing administrator, announced the RFC had agreed to buy mortgages insured under the FHA act. This he described as tantamount to establishment of a national mortgage association.

The mortgages will be purchased for the unpaid principal amount less half of 1 per cent where mortgagees agree to continue servicing them.

FHA insured mortgages bear 5 per cent interest rate, and some officials believe the RFC may make a tidy profit out of their purchase.

In this event, it was said, private finance probably would seek to establish mortgage associations under provisions of the FHA act. The RFC then could withdraw from the field and turn its mortgage buying activities over to private interests.

WPA Gives Omaha $261,563 for Relief

By the Associated Press.

Making the first such allotment since last December, the Works Progress Administration yesterday announced that Omaha would receive an additional $261,563 for direct relief.

WPA officials contended that this did not represent new money because it had been "earmarked" before liquidation of the FERA. Omaha is one of the cities which has vigorously demanded additional Federal allotments.

To date, most States and communities have concentrated their activities on enlargement of their WPA work relief quotas. The $38,000,000 allotted by Harry L. Hopkins to end the Federal Government's participation in direct relief is about exhausted.

Poll Showing Opposition to New Deal Recalls White House 'Bloomer.'

By Franklyn Waltman

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT last September sent a letter to the clergy of the country. In effect he asked them what they thought of the New Deal. Several days later a Kenosha, Wis., clergyman, receiving the letter found it strangely reminiscent of a letter he had received the previous March. He searched his file. There he found a letter from Gov. Philip La Follette containing paragraphs identical to several in the White House message.

Every since then the President's letter to the clergy has been a touchy subject around the White House. Exactly what happened has never been disclosed. One story is to the effect that a clergyman proposed the plan to get his colleagues of the cloth interested in the New Deal, but that when the letter had not been sent for sometime gave the idea to the La Follettes—the White House subsequently adopting the idea.

Another story, is that the La Follettes sent the idea to the White House, since it had been used successfully by them in Wisconsin. But they never intended that the language of their letter should be used without change. At all events, of all good political ideas this one turned out to be the prize bloomer of the year, if not of three or four years.

The incident assumes current interest because of the publication by the Literary Digest of its poll among American clergymen on whether they favor the New Deal. It will be recalled that the nature of the replies made by the clergy to the Roosevelt letter was never revealed. A number of clergymen, however, made public their answers—mostly opposing the New Deal. From the letter it was assumed that the majority of the replies disapproved of President Roosevelt's activities. But not until the Digest figures were published was the apparently strong hostility of the clergy to the New Deal realized.

The Digest received answers from 21,606 clergymen to its question: "Do you now approve the acts and policies of the Roosevelt New Deal to date?" Of this total, 6,434 replied "Yes;" 15,172 replied "No." In other words, 29.78 per cent of those answering approved of the New Deal, while 70.22 per cent disapproved. Thus it might be said that 7 out of every 10 clergymen participating in the poll—if not in the country—are hostile to the New Deal.

This is an astonishing result. It indicates that the clergy are more hostile to the New Deal than the country generally, measured by the Digest poll recently completed. This showed in a Nation-wide referendum on the same question that only 62.66 per cent of the participants opposed the New Deal. Whatever objections might be made to the Digest poll, the referendum among the clergymen should be more accurate than that among voters generally, for it deals with a single class and at least is representative.

Not only is this result astonishing but it is perplexing. Here the clergy of the country appear to be overwhelmingly opposed to a governmental regime which has dedicated itself to "social justice," to the "more abundant life" and to helping the destitute and the underprivileged—an Administration which boasts that it has eliminated child labor from industry, made an honest effort to end sweat-shop conditions and starvation wages and that it has established for the first time a system of social security on behalf of the aged and the helpless.

While financiers and businessmen may regard such objectives and achievements as visionary and impractical and more than offset by dangerous fiscal policies, it might be supposed that the clergy would be sympathetic. Have we not been told by the President that only the forces of "intrenched greed" are opposed to his Administration.

Yet, apparently, the clergy of the country are opposed to it—and they cannot be termed greedy for this world's goods. The reason is hard to find, unless it is contended that clergymen in their political reactions do not differ from other citizens. The Digest, in publishing the results, gives no clues as to the basis for this overwhelming hostility.

One suggestion for the opposition of the clergy to the New Deal is that it has been motivated by the President's espousal of the repeal of national prohibition. Undoubtedly many clergymen cannot forgive the President for that. This was indicated when some of them made public their replies to his letter of last September.

But prohibition hardly can be the controlling reason, for in 1934 the Digest conducted a poll of the clergy on the subject of the New Deal, and the result on that occasion was that 13,513 churchmen approved the New Deal, while a minority of 11,346 opposed it. If prohibition were the reason for today's hostility it should have been even more apparent in 1934.

Some observers believe that the President's letter of last fall has had a great deal to do with the changed attitude of the clergy as demonstrated by the two polls. The contention is made by those who have discussed the matter at some length with clergymen that the latter were angered by the White House subjecting them to political tactics.

On first receiving the President's letter many of them believed—and were encouraged to believe from its phraseology—that they were being singled out by Mr. Roosevelt for consultation and some of them were pleased and flattered. But within a few days they learned that a circular letter on White House stationery had been sent to them and all their brethren—and not an original circular letter, at that, but a copy of a letter used with political success six months previously on a small scale.

Such is said to be the feelings of some clergymen about that letter, and yet it does not seem conceivable that the clergy would indict the New Deal as a whole because of a piece of poor strategy that back-fired. Other observers report and have reported for several years that clergymen do not like what might be termed the continental mode of life in the White House—the easy-going manners of the President and his family, his smoking of cigarettes and the stories of several Christmases past describing the serving of beer at a White House party for young people.

Perhaps the hostility among the clergymen is a combination of these things and, again, perhaps the clergy are just like most Americans who are distrustful of an Administration leading the country away from fundamental institutions and beliefs and into a new, but also unknown, order of things.

Congress Votes Medal For Marine Corps Flier

Congressional action on a bill to give the Distinguished Flying Cross to Lieut. Col. Francis T. Evans of the Marine Corps, the first man to ever loop a seaplane, was completed yesterday with Senate passage of the measure which went to President Roosevelt for consideration. Evans, who performed his feat February 13, 1917, was appointed to the corps from Ohio.

Borah's Entry InPennsylvania Primaries Seen

May Make Test of Strength April 28; California, Tammany Problems Arise.

A report that Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho, will enter his name for the Republican Presidential nomination in the Pennsylvania primaries, April 28 for his first test of strength in the East, spread through the Capitol yesterday.

Although no word of denial or confirmation came from the Idaho Independent, friends of Borah said he is seriously considering such action, but wants to talk to several Pennsylvania Republican leaders before he makes a decision.

Senator Borah, who already has announced he will enter Illinois, Ohio and probably Oregon, had indicated at one time he would keep out of Pennsylvania, because of the expense. Friends, however, have assured him the cost would be negligible, and his chances good.

The Ohio requirement that delegate candidates in that State name a "second choice" on their ballots, meanwhile cropped up to plague Borah supporters.

It was learned that friends of Borah in Ohio, who are also friends of Gov. Alf Landon, of Kansas, have conferred on the possibility that Borah's candidates for delegates may name the Kansan as their second choice, but it was indicated here in Borah campaign qarters that the Idahoan knew nothing of the plan.

Discussed in Ohio.

One Capitol supporter said it had been discussed some time ago in Ohio, "but fell through, without Borah ever knowing anything about it." Gov. Landon would have to give his support to such an arrangement, and doubt was expressed that the Kansan, one of the strongest Republican contestants, would accept second place on any ballot.

Political developments came thick and fast on the Washington front, with both the Tammany and California situations brought to the fore by a series of White House conferences.

Postmaster General Farley, chairman of the Democratic national committee, lunched for an hour with the President at the White House, and later indicated that the California Democratic slate of delegates, which the President is required personally to choose, will be announced shortly.

Farley also disclosed that Hamilton Cotton, opposed by the EPIC group of Democrats in the State as a "reactionary," will be on the California slate.

Game of Compromise.

Farley was asked about this by reporters, and replied:

"It couldn't be helped. Politics is a game of compromise, you know."

From Los Angeles, the Associated Press reported last night that State Chairman Culbert Olson had declared that a California delegation composed of "Liberal" delegates and an equal number of supporters of Senator William Gibbs McAdoo would be "a terrible thing." He added that "the temper of democracy requires no compromise."

The President meanwhile made what was construed here as a gesture to Tammany, by conferring at separate times with Jeremiah T. Mahoney, a delegate, and Thomas J. McMahon, an alternate.

What they said later indicated that they may not agree with the "take a walk" views of Alfred E. Smith, who will head the Tammany delegation to the Philadelphia convention.

Mahoney said the Tammany delegation would vote "solidly Roosevelt," and New York would vote the same way. Mahoney added that "Al can speak for himself."

McMahon brought an invitation to Roosevelt to address the National Democratic Club in New York, now scheduled for April 18, but which may be postponed until April 25 so the President can accept. McMahon is president of the club.

Other developments yesterday:

Associated Press reported from Boston that former Lieut. Gov. Gasper G. Bacon gave impetus to the Landon-for-President movement in an address before Republican women there. Bacon compared Landon to Calvin Coolidge, and warned against nominating a "reactionary." He declared that "the old order is gone" and said no "trimmer" could defeat Roosevelt.

The Idahoan made plans to review at least some of the campaign issues in a George Washington's Birthday broadcast tomorrow night from Washington, to be relayed over 87 stations of the Columbia network.

Two speeches were scheduled by Farley, one tonight at a St. Louis mass meeting, and another tomorrow night from Topeka.

Landon Hailed.

The first Landon-pledged delegates were chosen yesterday by the convention of the Second Congressional District Republicans in Kansas. Resolutions praising the Governor were adopted and he was hailed as "Kansas' greatest Governor" and the next President.

Former Gov. Gifford Pinchot, of Pennsylvania, who has conferred several times with Senator Borah on the Idahoan's entering the Keystone State primaries, attacked the New Deal in a radio speech last night.

"Under Franklin Roosevelt the Government at Washington is a mess," he said. Everybody knows it. Even Democrats admit it—but not for publication.

"The business of the American people—your business—is to clean up that mess. For that will make a difference to you."

Wagner Labor Act Attacked In D. C. Court

Counsel for Bay State Firm Charges Law Violates Constitution.

By the Associated Press.

The District Supreme Court was told yesterday that Congress clearly exceeded its powers in passing the Wagner labor disputes act.

Counsel for the Lawrence Leather Co. made this contention in asking Justice Jesse Adkins to enjoin permanently the Labor Relations Board from holding hearing on a complaint against the company's Peabody, Mass., plant.

The board, set up by the Wagner act, complained that the company "dominated" an employee representation plan in violation of the act.

Counsel contended the company would suffer "grave and irreparable injury" if the hearing were allowed.

The company further maintained that tanning was a local and intrastate business and did not directly affect interstate or foreign commerce.

To pass a law, company counsel added, Congress must find specific authority in the Constitution. The court's decisions wiping out NRA codes and the railroad retirement act last spring were cited in support of this claim.

Counsel for 133 class 1 railroads, 2 express companies, the Pullman Co. and Government lawyers continued on a motion to dismiss a suit by the railroads to enjoin the new Railroad Retirement Board from administering the act.

Hauptmann's Counsel Urges Condon Return

Plea for Aid Cites News Reel; Holds Jafsie Said Bruno Had Accomplices.

By the United Press.

Trenton, N. J., Feb. 20.—Counsel for Bruno Richard Hauptmann called on Dr. John F. Condon tonight to return to the United States and help save their client from the electric chair.

C. Lloyd Fisher, chief attorney for the convicted murderer of the Lindbergh baby, said the defense had newsreel film in which Jafsie——who passed $50,000 ransom across a cemetery wall—said Hauptmann undoubtedly had accomplices.

At the Flemington trial Condon testified all his negotiations were with one man—Hauptmann.

Fisher's appeal to Condon came at a time when Gov. Harold G. Hoffman, shaken by the withdrawal of Samuel Liebowitz, New York lawyer, from the case, was considering sending a letter to Condon asking him to return. Condon is on a vacation in Panama.

Hoffman has four specific questions he wants to ask Condon. All of them are based on the theory that Hauptmann had accomplices.

Fisher joined in Hoffman's appeal today by saying:

"If I were John Condon and I knew the defense contended my story was shot full of holes I would take the first boat or plane back to this country. It would be on my conscience. Then, too, the district attorney ought to produce him. We have a newsreel film of Condon which shows that he said Hauptmann must have had accomplices."

Hauptmann Sends Note.

Fisher's statement indicated that the entire energy of the defense between now and the time Hauptmann is due to be executed will be concentrated on trying to bring Condon back to this country and have him answer questions.

From his cell in the death house, Hauptmann sent a note to Principal Keeper Mark O. Kimberling, of the State prison, asking for an interview with Condon. Kimberling said he would inform Hauptmann that he had not power to order or request Condon's return. Uninterested lawyers say Condon was the most damaging witness against Hauptmann. He identified him as the man to whom he talked in two cemeteries while the ransom negotiations were being conducted and when the money finally was paid.

He spent two days on the witness stand at Flemington and Hauptmann's lawyers used every resource at their command to try to prove that Condon was implicated in the crime. The 72-year-old man came through the cross-examination unshaken and Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and Henry Breckinridge, the flier's lawyer, provided character testimony.

Kimberling laughed tonight when told of published reports that Hauptmann had been shown the electric chair yesterday in an attempt to drag a confession out of him. He said that was physically impossible for two reasons—Hauptmann can not see the execution chamber from its cell and he was not taken out the cell and, second, the chair is kept covered with canvas.

Fisher, who was present at the interview with Hauptmann and Leibowitz yesterday, also denied that any such tactics had been used.

Hoffman has ordered full steam ahead to the new investigation.

A list of written questions, submitted to Hoffman by newspapermen, elicited a response only to this one:

"Do the statements of Leibowitz influence your position that the Lindbergh case is still unsolved?"

"I am more convinced than ever," the Governor replied. He added that he hoped Leibowitz, in almost nine hours' questioning, would have been able to pry something out of Hauptman. But in view of the lawyer's failure, Hoffman said, he would adhere to his original belief.

With Hauptmann again under sentence of death, Ellis Parker, Burlington County detective, who shares the Governor's doubts that Hauptmann alone committed the crime, is working on New Jersey angles of the case.

The United Press learned tonight that there are four specific questions Hoffman wants Condon to answer.

Hoffman Questions.

The Governor still has under consideration a proposal to write a letter to Condon, who is in Panama, asking him to return and be questioned before the week of March 30, when Hauptmann is under sentence of death. What Hoffman wants to know is:

Who was the man with an Italian accent who broke into a telephone conversation that Hauptmann was having with Condon over payment of ransom?

Who was the woman who entered a charity bazzar in the Bronx and made an appointment to meet Condon—an appointment Condon never kept?

Why was Condon not called upon to explain his statement that he said somebody offered him $250,000 to change his testimony against Hauptmann? The Governor contends Hauptmann could not have made that offer because he was in prison.

Why did Condon at first say that more than one person was involved in the crime and later change to the story that Hauptmann alone was responsible?

Sardo Boy Starts for Mother's Home ocean, too—you remember when you visited me?"

"It's cold. You can't swim in the ocean now," Albert observed.

Then he looked at Mrs. Villapiano solemnly.

"There'll be girls and boys for me to play with there?"

His mother nodded.

United once more, mother and son sat together recalling the days when Albert was much smaller—the days when his mother had seen him all the time, and tucked him into bed each night.

"Those days are here again," she suggested happily.

"I'm sorry to leave, grandpa, of course," he said.

"And, if you please, mother, I want to get my dog, Theresa, sent up to me as soon as possible.

"Theresa's going to howl for me, I know. Can I have her in Asbury Park?"

Mrs. Villapiano authorized Richards to ship Theresa as soon as possible.

McMullen

hands of the court, composed of ten generals and a colonel, after opposing attorneys had pictured him as "an officer to be put where he can not bring disgrace upon the uniform of the United States Army" and as a man "who was actuated by the human motive of seeking to get to the bedside of his stricken son."

In a sharp attack against the House Military Affairs Committee, Defense Attorney William E. Leahy, shouted: "I've noticed three members of that committee around the doors. I wonder if they are attempting to bulldoze this court. Thank God for this court of honor, which will not permit an officer to be broken on the wheel because it might help some politicians."

In January, 1934, Col. McMullen, "kept neither his wits or his honor bright," charged Maj. James E. Morrisette, assistant trial judge advocate. "He was bound by two codes, the code of honor of the Army and the ethics of the bar. He was twice advised and he twice acted improperly."

"If his son was ill," Morrisette argued, "why, of all people did he go to a second-hand clothes dealer for help?"

Morrisette ridiculed the defense contention that payment for tickets was applied against the car purchase. "Why didn't they produce the bill of sale?" he asked.

"Put Col. McMullen where he can't bring discredit to the uniform he should be so proud to wear!" he shouted.

The defense contention of payment for the ticket was substantiated by Lieut. Col. F. Randall, who was called in rebuttal by the prosecution. Under cross-examination by Leahy, Randall stated McMullen had informed him that Silverman had offered to get the tickets for him without any request on McMullen's part.

"This officer did not intend to leave Washington until he had received a telegram on January 19 saying that his son was desperately ill," Leahy asserted.

"It is not dishonor to love one's son. Nor is it dishonor to want to be at his bedside when he is dying. That is the same humane motive that would have actuated every member of this court."

Baby Is Born As Strange Gas Fells 2 Nurses

Doctor, Almost Overcome, Rallies to Finish Task; Inquiry Started.

Woburn, Mass., Feb. 20 (AP).—A strange gas felled two nurses attending a young mother on a hospital delivery table here, nearly overcame a third and nearly prevented the attending physician from finishing his task. The doctor underwent emergency treatment afterward.

Tonight the mother, unaware of what had happened, was recovering. Her identity was not disclosed. The child, an eight-pound boy, was doing well.

Engineers summoned by the Choate Memorial Hospital sought the source of the gas which contaminated the chamber.

The physician, Dr. Thomas F. Halpin, said he thought the operating room became filled with carbon monoxide gas, but added he did not know the source.

Heating Appliance Studied.

The hospital superintendent, Mrs. Edith L. Morgan, said sterilizing equipment heated by illuminating gas was being studied as a possible source.

"I first became aware of a severe headache," Dr. Halpin said. "I couldn't breathe because of a sharp pain in my chest.

"I turned to one of the nurses to ask her to get me a chair. As I was speaking to her she fell unconscious.

"Just then the nurse on the other side of the operating table collapsed. The third nurse staggered out of the room, near collapse herself. She pushed open the large doors from the operating room. There was a blast of fresh air. It felt great.

"I was partly overcome. More nurses came and they sent for another doctor. Then I completed the delivery."

Given Emergency Treatment.

The nurses affected were Catherine Bradford, night superintendent; Carrie Jones and Martha Doherty, student nurse.

Dr. Daniel Joyce, of the hospital staff, gave emergency treatment to the nurses and to Dr. Halpin.

"I don't think the baby got much of the gas," Dr. Halpin said. "I took it right out of the operating room, and I had the mother taken out as quickly as possible."

Because the mother was under an anesthesia, "she couldn't have known what happened," Dr. Halpin added. The child was the mother's first.

"Both the mother and the little baby boy are fine now, and I don't think they'll suffer any after effects at all," the physician added.

W. Robert Moore, who recently returned from a nine months' tour of Australia and New Zealand, will describes his travels by airplane and automobile in New Zealand, to members of the National Geographic Society at Constitution Hall, tonight at 8:15 o'clock.

Within this area, about as large as Colorado, Moore, who is one of the Geographic's leading writer-photographers, found almost as many wonders of Nature as all the rest of the world affords. Sound motion pictures and colored slides, depicting life in the Dominion "down under" among both the white and Maori populations, will illustrate the lecture.

Italians Mass Troop In New Drive on Harar

Rome, Feb. 20 (AP).—A huge force of Italian and native troops, supplemented by airplane, armored cars and tanks, of Gen. Rodolfo Graziani's Somaliland army, pressed forward tonight in a renewed drive on Harar, most important eastern city of Ethiopia.

The way already has been cleared by effective and demoralizing bombing and machine gunning raids, participated in by 300 airplanes. No report on the offensive has been received from Marshal Pietro Badoglio, commander in chief of Italy's East African armies.

Police Suspend 2 'False Alarm' Youths Permits

Pair Recently Freed on 29 Fake Fire Charges, 10 Others Lose Cards.

Although "probation and personal bonds" freed them in Police Court recently, Adams Martin Wyant, jr., 18, and Waldo Wilson Whitehead, 18, accused false-alarm ringers, were forced to pay a penalty yesterday.

Their driving permits were suspended for an indefinite period after members of the board of review and revocation of Operators' permits held they "used a motor car for illegal purposes."

At the same time, in Police Court, another accused false-alarm ringer was released on his personal bond when it was testified that he sounded the alarm to bring aid. Charles Brown, the defendant, told Judge Gus A. Schuldt the cellar of his home on Fifteenth street northeast became flooded during the recent "thaw."

Basement "Emergency."

A policemen testified that the basement was covered with water when he arrived. Judge Schuldt ruled that Brown had not violated the law, since he had no other means of communicaton. The flooded cellar was termed an "emergency."

In Traffic Court, 18-year-old Chris Smith, 18, of 903 Farragut street northwest, was fined $15 on a second-offense speed charge. He told Judge Walter J. Casey he "would have to sell his car to pay the penalty."

Walter M. Bastian, president of the District Bar Association, appeared in behalf of young Smith and told Judge Casey that "selling the car was the best thing he could do."

"The boy is too young to drive," said Bastian, "I have no defense for this young man. He is the son of a friend of mine who is now dead. I believe the boy has learned his lesson. Like all other young people under the age of 21, he is not reckless, he is only irresponsible."

Urges Age Limit of 21.

Bastian advocated legislation prohibiting driving by persons under 21.

"I have an 18-year-old son who gives me gray hair every time he is out with the car," said Bastian.

Wyant and Whitehead, the two "false alarm" youths, were charged with sounding 29 fake alarms during a wild ride on ice-coated streets the night of January 25. All but seven charges were dropped and Judge Isaac R. Hitt released the pair.

Attorneys for the boys said yesterday that the permits would be surrendered immediately.

The board of revocation and restoration yesterday ordered the suspension of the operators' licenses for speeding of the following ten motorists:

Thirty-Day Suspension.

Kenneth Isaacs, Berwyn, Md., 48 miles; John W. Kern, Silver Spring, Md., 40 miles; Henry Stowers, 2225 Thirty-ninth street northwest, 40 miles; James M. Townsend, Brooksville, Md., 36 miles, second offense.

Forty-Five-Day Suspension.

Rupert Fogle, Clinton, Md., 40 miles, second offense.

Revocation.

Ned Bord, 3100 Connecticut avenue northwest, 50 miles; Augustus Crawford, 151 Todd place northeast, 60 miles; Clyde Dexter, 119 Bates street northwest, 50 miles, second offense; Robert Fitz, 1126 Fifth street northwest, 54 miles; Ralph Harlan, 1214 Park road northwest, 50 miles, second offense.

Yesterday, this car was still parked in violation of the law—between two "no parking, entrance" signs. A check revealed that it had not been moved since 9 p. m. Tuesday. District regulations prohibit street parking longer than 18 hours at a time.

This car, too, bears a "Congressional" tag. The owner has not bothered to move it and the neighborhood residents are still up in arms. Police are powerless to act because of the driver's "immunity."

Down at New Jersey avenue and C street, between the new and old House Office buildings, a car with Texas and "Congressional" tags was found by The Post reporter, parked in open violation of a "no parking" sign. This car was also in the same place yesterday. No effort had been made to move it. Snow covered the top.

A car with Kansas tags parked within a few inches of a "stop sign;" an Ohio car standing between two "no parking at anytime signs;" a car with Rhode Island tags blocking a crosswalk, forcing pedestrians to walk in the street; a Missouri car defying a sign reading "no parking to corner."

Congress makes the laws—the law demands "equal justice."

But one lawmaker reputedly said: "To hell with it—you can't arrest me!"

Suspect Arrested After 20-Year Hunt

By the Associated Press.

The Justice Department announced yesterday the arrest of a former Navy paymaster charged with embezzling approximately $20,000 of Government funds.

J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Bureau of Investigation, said Federal agents had been seeking John M. Cornell since 1916. Cornell surrendered at the New York office of the bureau February 18.

Hoover said Cornell has admitted his guilt and has been turned over to naval authorities. Cornell was quoted as saying that after serving in the World War he adopted the name of Robert E. Hastings. Since 1919 he has operated an accounting firm in St. Louis, Mo.

U. S. Bars Talk France Sought On Battleships

Philips Tells de Laboulaye Matter Will Be Taken Up Only at London.

By the Associated Press.

A flat refusal to discuss battleship tonnages outside of the London naval conference was handed the French government yesterday by the United States.

Diplomatically but pointedly, William Philips, Under-Secretary of State, informed the French Ambassador, Andre de Laboulaye, that the American Government was not disposed to talk about the matter except through its official representatives at the conference.

Simultaneously, legislation for a 10-year program for construction of 221,000 tons of naval auxiliary vessels was started on its way through the congressional mill. Overriding Navy Department preference for blanket authorization, the House Naval Affairs Committee gave its support to a measure specifying 54 auxiliary vessels to be built at an estimated cost of $175,000,000.

France, seeking future limitation of battleships to 27,500 tons, appealed two days ago directly to the State Department through De Laboulaye for a reduction in the American demand for a maximum tonnage of 35,000.

The French envoy, who called late yesterday on Secretary Philips to receive the reply, was given no indication of the American attitude toward the French proposal for a cut in tonnage, but was told that the American delegation at London was prepared to discuss all phases on questions which properly are presented to the Naval Conference.

The State Department spokesman added an expression of hope that the French delegation at the conference would discuss the matter fully there.

Such a procedure was described as especially desirable since there appears to be a possibility of general acceptance of other points now being considered at the parley.

Chairman Vinson (Democrat), Georgia, of the House Naval Committee, said he believed inclusion in the auxiliary ship bill of specific vessels authorized would help get the bill through Congress.

The committee took cognizance of the London naval negotiations.

While the question was raised that the committee might defer action on the auxiliary program until results of the London conference are known and the needs of the Navy determined in light of possible developments, Vinson said he wanted an early vote and indicated the bill might be reported today.

U. S. Accepts Offer by Greece To Pay on Debt

Will Send 35 Per Cent, $76,272, of November, May Payments.

By the Associated Press.

A Greek offer of actual cash in part payment of war debts—the first from a defaulting European debtor nation in more than two years—has been accepted by the United States.

Authoritative sources said last night the State Department has sent a note to Demetrios Sicilianos, the Greek Minister, expressing willingness to credit any payments made to Greece's account if they are "without prejudice to the contractural rights of the United States."

Finland has met its debt installments promptly and in full, but other European nations which now owe the United States $12,437,837,030 have defaulted on all recent payments.

Greece, in an offer made to the State Department through Sicilianos, and transmitted to the Treasury for study before action was taken, agreed to pay 35 per cent of the coupon value of payments due May 10 and November 10. This would amount to $76,272 of the $217,920 due on each date.

The $142,544 would be in partial payment of 1936 interest on the "4 per cent loan of 1929," amounting to $12,167,000, which was used in financing resettlement of nearly 3,000,000 Greeks in their homeland from Turkish territory after the World War.

A similar offer, made to the League of Nations loans committee and the British council of foreign bondholders, representing European creditors, was rejected recently with a demand that payment be at least 50 per cent of the amount due.

State and Treasury department officials said last night they had no information concerning when the Greek offer would be translated into actual cash, or how the payments were to be made.

surplus waters or water power, or water supply, or power-producing facilities acquired or constructed in furtherance of its duties and may own, operate and maintain any water supply or hydro-electric plant, together with the appurtenant pumping stations, mains, stand-by steam or other electrical equipment, transmission and distribution lines for the supply of the United States Government within the District of Columbia and of any community or political subdivision adjacent to the said Potomac River or its tributaries."

No agreement for the sale or lease of any interest in lands owned by PVA and no agreement for a period in excess of a year could be executed without approval of the comptroller general.

Power Group to Approve.

Any contract for sale or other disposition of water or power or water supply would be subject to approval by the Federal Power Commission, which would determine the respective proportion of investments in other PVA projects, such as improvements of navigation, elimination of pollution, and the like.

A clause is inserted to link whatever dams the PVA may build to the Wilson Dam in that they would insure the Federal agencies in the District of adequate power and water supply under war conditions.

The PVA is given somewhat the same legal status as any other corporation except that it would have much broader powers, such as the right to exercise eminent domain and to condemn property in acquiring real estate.

Elaborate qualifications and standards for the operation of the PVA are provided in the bill, and it is specifically stated that no administrator may have an interest in private power interest or water supply.

Power Sale Authorized.

Surplus power could be sold to States, counties, municipalities, corporations, partnerships, or individuals. The PVA is authorized to construct transmission lines to farms and villages not otherwise supplied with electricity "at reasonable rates."

The bill imposes upon PVA the duty of constructing and maintaining dams, locks, channels and the like necessary to provide a clear draft of six feet for vessels navigating the Potomac River to Cumberland, Md.

Rankin said he expected a companion bill to be introduced in the Senate. He did not say by whom, but it is known he hopes to persuade Senator Norris (Republican), of Nebraska, to sponsor the measure.

Senator Norris several years ago fathered a bill to develop a Government-owned hydroelectric plant at Great Falls, and though the measure passed the Senate twice, it was blocked in the House.

Mediators Act As Ohio Strikes Affect 16,000

Goodyear Plant Appeals to Court on Picketing; 2 Other Plants Shut.

By the Associated Press.

Akron, Ohio, Feb. 20.—Federal mediators sought common ground tonight for an arbitration conference to end the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. strike as labor controversies in three Ohio cities threw more than 16,000 out of work.

The Goodyear Co. petitioned common pleas court for an injunction restraining strikers from blockading entrances to its three closed plants where 14,000 normally are employed. The court will hear arguments on the petition tomorrow.

Civil authorities, headed by Mayor Lee Schroy and Sheriff James T. Flower, participated in a conference with officials of the United Rubber Workers Union at which they requested the union's specific demands.

More than 460 Chemical Union employes of the closed Columbia Chemical Co., at nearby Barberton, continued their sympathetic "sit-down," which started yesterday, in an effort to force the management to grant union pipe fitters and helpers a wage increase of 4 cents an hour.

Their families sent food to them by other union men, stationed outside as pickets. The company employs more than 900 persons.

Glass Plant Closed.

Executives of the Libbey-Owens-Ford Co. ordered its laminated glass plant at Toledo closed, throwing 1,400 persons out of work, because of a strike of 200 employes starting when 24 women refused to work with others not members of the American Flat Glass Workers Union.

Department of Labor Mediators T. W. Chappell and Edward C. McDonald met with S. H. Dalrymple, Rubber Workers Union chieftain, and John House, Goodyear local president, to discuss the rubber strikers' demands as Goodyear spokesmen announced the company would confer only with non-striking employes.

Approximately 800 of the latter, kept from their work by dense picket lines, assembled in an auditorium and awaited a report from the mediators.

Chappell and McDonald said they would leave the union conference, meet with the non-striking group and finally with company representatives.

Officials of the Akron, Canton and Youngstown Railroad intimated they would ask a Federal Court injunction to keep pickets from preventing delivery of coal on a spur track to Goodyear property.

Equipment in Danger.

Strikers have halted coal shipments twice. The company said lack of fuel would "damage millions of dollars worth of equipment."

The strike, starting from a "sit-down" of both union and non-union tire builders last week, approached the end of its third day with no violence other than occasional fist fights between pickets and non-striking employes.

The "sit-down," union officials said, was started because of dismissal of some employes. The company said the dismissals were due to curtailed production and agreed to take the men back, but the men continued the "sit-down."

Kitchens, tents, makeshift windbreaks, bonfires and temporary strike headquarters have been set up by strikers and their wives to offer shelter to heavily-clad pickets braving consistently low temperatures.

Impeachment of Judge Asked by House Group

By the United Press.

Impeachment of Federal Judge Halstead L. Ritter, of the Southern District of Florida, was demanded in a resolution filed by the House Judiciary Committee yesterday.

Chairman Hatton W. Sumner (Democrat), Texas, of the Judiciary Committee said he would not seek House action on the charges of misbehavior, high crimes and misdemeanors until next week. Judge Ritter had asked time to file an answer to the allegations.

The committee report, drafted after hearings before a special subcommittee, charged that Ritter had "brought his court into scandal and disrepute" through handling of several cases, most of them involving receivership fees.

By the Associated Press.

Capture of two alleged counterfeiters at Black Wolf, W. Va., together with the seizure of 45 notes and a complete counterfeiting set, was announced today by the secret service.

Air Chief Urges Adequate Army Aviation Force

By the Associated Press.

Foretelling a time when air armadas can be hurled from continent to continent as easily—and much more speedily—than present-day naval vessels, Maj. Gen. Oscar Westover, chief of the Army Air Corps, last night urged development of America's military aviation to insure adequate defense.

Addressing a Y. M. C. A. forum here, Gen. Westover detailed the rapid progrers of aerial advancement in recent years and contended that today oceans are not insuperable barriers to the airplane.

"The next generation," he added, "must reconcile itself to the fact that large fleets of airplanes can be projected from continent to continent as easily as large fleets of naval vessels can be moved today, and with a speed enabling such movement to be effected in the hours of daylight.

Will Fear Destructive Power.

"America will then fear the destructive power of these in the same way as Europe fears them today.

Recalling the post-war centralization of the light and power industry in the industrial East, he said:

"I have made a study of some of the most vital power plants in the country and I assure you that aerial photographs disclose a startling distinctiveness in construction and type, and the very fact that smoke normally flows out of the chimneys gives to the aerial bomber the missing link of information as to wind direction, by means of which he can accurately discharge his bomb load and strike the objective.

"The destruction of such plants would have the most far-reaching effect upon our military and industrial preparedness, and also upon the transportation systems and domestic comfort of our people."

Blanket Authorization Refused.

Meanwhile, yesterday the House Naval Committee overrode Navy Department preference for blanket authorization of 221,000 tons of new auxiliary ship construction and took up a revised bill specifying 54 vessels to be built under the proposed ten-year program involving approximately $175,000,000.

Rear Admiral Joseph K. Taussig, acting chief of naval operations, told the committee the Navy was "not ready to impose an objection." But he added that the chief of naval operations would "much prefer" authorization for blanket tonnage without specifying the vessels to be built.

"This proposal is for a treaty navy and is urgently needed at the present time," said the admiral. "A new treaty is now being made in London and we may need different ships than are specified in this revised bill."

today, giving tangible evidence of its recognition of this fact, the National Federation of Federal Employes believes that the conferees on the bills should be able to effect a compromise which will bring the measures, for final adoption, closer to the original legislation, as passed by the House at the last session.

"The National Federation of Federal Employes believes that it is especially important that the section providing for compensatory time be retained, as originally provided, and that a greater cumulation, especially of sick leave, be provided."

Trimble Lays U.S. Depression To Bank Clique

International Ring Caused Ills, Says Letter to Business Chiefs.

By the Associated Press.

International bankers yesterday were blamed for the depression by South Trimble, clerk of the House, in identical letters sent Harper Sibley, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, and R. V. Fleming, president of the American Bankers Association.

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, had the letter read in the Senate.

Worded in question and answer form, Trimble put the queries as to who caused the depression, and replied to the effect that God, farmers and merchants were not to blame. He added:

"Who is responsible?

"My answer is, the international bankers, with headquarters in London, operating in this country through emissaries and their satellites, principally the bankers who (to be charitable) are unwittingly and ignorantly the pliant tools of the emissaries of the international bankers."

Dangerous Subterfuge.

Trimble continued:

"Permit me to admonish you that the most dangerous subterfuge now being preached by plutocracy, in the interest of monopoly, is the doctrine that the industrial masses have no remedy at the hands of the law. * * *

"The great masses of the people (not including J. P. Morgan's 'leisure class,' which he defines 'a family that can afford one servant' and 'the Nation's hope to avert revolution and save civilization') have been bamboozled and sandbagged by plutocrats, until they are losing faith in everything but brute force. Already anarchy is rife in the great cities, and communism is spreading in the country like a prairie fire. But the danger still remains—will remain as long as people educated to believe themselves the equal of kings and the superiors of princes, cannot obtain sufficient food for themselves and families."

Return to Old Order.

Trimble told newspapermen he had noticed that Sibley and Fleming were making speeches for a return to "the old order," and contending recovery could not be legislated.

"I took issue with them as public men making public statements," he said. "I felt I had a right to do that."

He quoted Sibley as saying, in a Philadelphia speech last October: "Recovery lies in the old system."

In a speech at the same place, Trimble continued, Fleming said 'we cannot legislate ourselves back to recovery."

Week's Illness Proves Fatal To Rhinelander

Scion of Old N. Y. Family Startled Society in 1924 by Wedding Negress.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 20.—Leonard Kip Rhinelander, 34, who startled New York society a decade ago by marrying the daughter of a Negro taxi driver, died today of lobar pneumonia.

Death came after a week's illness at the Long Beach home of Rhinelander's father, with whom he became reconciled after winning a sensational six-year court struggle to cast off his wife.

Rhinelander, scion of one of New York's oldest families, had been working in his father's Manhattan real estate office since he obtained a divorce at Las Vegas, Nev., in 1930.

His divorced wife, the former Alice Jones, said news of his death made her "very, very sad."

"I never loved anybody but Leonard and I never will love anybody else," she said at New Rochelle, where she is living with her widowed white mother.

She received $300 a month for life under the divorce settlement. Her father, a West Indian Negro, died three years ago.

Lee Parsons Davis, her attorney, said she had waived any future claim on the Rhinelander family in accepting the $300 a month arrangement. She has no dower interest in her former husband's estate, he added.

In making this statement today, Davis set at rest long-published reports that his client had received a large lump sum.

Young Rhinelander, then 23, married Alice Beatrice Jones, a housemaid several years his senior, October 14, 1924.

When news of the union leaked out a month later the patrician circles in which the Rhinelanders moved were astounded.

Leonard left his bride November 20. Five days later he brought suit for annulment, charging his bride had deceived him as to her color.

They had met in 1921 while Rhinelander was motoring with a friend. Testimony at the annulment hearing showed he had wooed her ardently until his father broke up the courtship by sending him away for two years.

When Rhinelander became of age he inherited $300,000, and sometime later renewed his interest in the Jones girl with the result that they were married.

A jury at White Plains found against him in the annulment trial. The jurors decided that Rhinelander knew of his bride's Negro blood when he married her.

There followed several years of litigation, ending in the Nevada divorce.

Aside from his father, Rhinelander leaves a sister, Mrs. John Livingston Thomas, and a brother, Philip Rhinelander 2d. His mother died in 1916.

Victor Metcalf; Dies at 82; Held 2 Cabinet Posts

Former Representative Was Navy, Commerce and Labor Head

By the Associated Press.

Oakland, Calif., Feb. 20.—Victor H. Metcalf, 82, Secretary of Commerce and Labor and Secretary of the Navy under President Theodore Roosevelt, died here today.

A native of Utica, N. Y., Metcalf was graduated from Yale Law School in 1876, and married Emily Corinne Nicholson, of Oakland, six years later. He practiced law in Utica and Oakland, and in 1899 was elected to Congress from the Third California District.

He resigned July 1, 1904, to become Secretary of Labor and Commerce. He was named Secretary of the Navy December 17, 1906, and served until December 1, 1908.

His death followed that of his wife by less than six weeks.

Metcalf served three terms in Congress, resigning when appointed to the Cabinet.

Following San Francisco's earthquake and fire in 1906, he was asked by President Roosevelt to suggest what part the Government might take in rehabilitation. The President recommended his advice to Congress "exactly" as suggested.

His appointment as Secretary of the Navy in 1906 immediately followed his first Cabinet post. He maintained an active interest in the Republican Party after his retirement.

Surviving are a son, William, and two grandchildren, Victor and Barbara.

Narcotics Shift Opposed

lem of the illicit traffic in narcotics, the police side of the situation.

Under the bill, the State Department charged, the administrative and statistics-gathering side of the narcotics control set-up would be placed under the police administration, as represented by the Secret Service. They further charged that this not only would weaken effective control now being administered, but also would submerge the narcotics problem in a unit which primarily would be handling counterfeiting and other crimes.

The druggists, drug manufacturers and doctors objected strenuously to this and their objections have not been met in full, it was learned last night.

The State Department also feared that foreign nations, thinking Congress had abandoned the full principles of international control, would decide to lessen their own efforts for control of opium, heroin and other drugs.

Fight Against Change.

Desperate in the fear that the efforts of 24 years of negotiation, beginning in 1912, and resulting in an international fabric that tightened a complete mesh around the problem, were to be wasted by a mere organization shift, the State Depamrtent officials fought furiously to preserve the status quo, as far as possible.

It is reliably reported that Secretary Morgenthau, angered, personally assailed State Department officials, and was answered with considerable heat before negotiations ending Tuesday solved at least this part of the problem.

The Treasury experts re-drafted the bill's two most vital sections to permit continuance of th Narcotics Bureau in its present methods of functioning, with especial regard to its treaty obligations and freedom to communicate internationally without such communications passing through the Secretary of State's office. It is the only agency of the Government with this power.

The amendments added day before yesterday to the bill were received with considerable satisfaction by the State Department, but the reactions of the drug groups and the doctors are uncertain.

To illustrate the difference in the four viewpoints:

The Treasury Department officials yesterday said that the amendments added to the bill preserve not only the letter, but also the spirit, of the original narcotics bureau set-up.

The State Department said officially that the amendments preserved the letter and a portion of the spirit of the treaty obligations. Unofficially it was said the spirit was not observed.

The drug groups' spokesmen held that neither the letter nor the spirit had been preserved, pointing to the one line which states that the functions of the narcotics bureau must be under the control and direction of the chief of the Secret Service division. This, they said yesterday, nullifies the spirit of the international agreement.

The reactions of the doctors of the Nation, now holding an American Medical Association convention in Chicago, are in doubt. Their support was considered so essential by the Treasury Department that a special envoy of the department was dispatched to Chicago to explain the bill to them. This was done, it was believed, to counteract the strongly worded pleas sent by the drug groups to the doctors.

It was reported on reliable authority that the Treasury envoy to Chicago yesterday wired Washington officials that the doctors' reactions had been favorable.

Much concern has been expressed in all quarters over the report that the bill would be shoved through the committee in the House without public hearings. It was believed, however, that hearings would be insisted on in the Senate if the bill were passed in the House without public hearing.

The Treasury viewpoint on the consolidation of the four units, including the controversial Narcotic Bureau, has been assailed bitterly during the last month in the constant meetings between interested groups, it is known.

This viewpoint, however, was known to be founded on a belief, backed by experience in the department with its four bureaus in the past, that greater regional and national efficiency can be reached by having local activities tied up under centralized authority, direction and supervision in each area. At present customs, alcohol tax, secret service and narcotics men, working side by side in the same area, report individually on their activities to their Washington chiefs, who pass the findings on to the Secretary of the Treasury. It is not until such findings and reports reach the Secretary's office that any co-ordination or concerted action is possible.

For this reason, and for the added enforcement and prosecution effectiveness held possible under co-ordinated direction under a single chief in Washington, the Treasury believes the bill should pass.

Opponents point out that the same end might be achieved merely by executive order of the Secretary of the Treasury, since all units involved are already Treasury units. They charge that the reorganization, which all parties agree is not for economy reasons, would merely provide some important new jobs, chief of which would be the post of Chief of the Secret Service Division as reorganized, with a $10,000 a year salary.

International repercussions are expected. The Opium Advisory Committee of the League meets in Geneva May 18 and at that time Stuart Fuller, of the Far Eastern Affairs section of the State Department, and representative of the United States as a rule to this meeting, must report to the committee on legislation passed during the year. It is felt that he will have considerable explaining to do to satisfy other governments that the Narcotics Bureau of this country has not been minimized in importance or its strength weakened under the new set-up.

An Intolerable Boycott.

Apparently, as the result of a promise made to representatives of various farm organizations in 1933, when modification of the Volstead act was under consideration, the organized brewery workers have forbidden their members to handle barley malt that does not carry the union label. As there is only one non-union malting company in this country, this order is virtually equivalent to imposing a ban upon foreign malt imports. In this way the union proposes to fulfill its pledge to the farmers to further the use of American grain in the manufacture of beer.

When, as in the present instance, an industry is strongly organized, a union ban upon competing foreign products may have serious consequences. It requires little imagination to realize the dangerous potentialities of such arbitrary unofficial boycotting of the products of friendly nations with which this country desires to improve trade relations. Belgium, being particularly hard hit by the union's action, has officially suggested that this is a violation of the recently negotiated reciprocal trade agreement. Six other countries have also filed representations on the subject.

The stupidity of the union policy is as amazing as its high-handedness. Since domestic malting companies are working at high capacity, there is no threat to labor from malt importations. And it is assuredly no advantage to agriculture thus to antagonize nations that buy our surplus cotton and other farm products. If these short-sighted tactics should lead to reprisals on the part of foreign buyers of American goods, we should speedily discover the truth of the economic adage that nations must buy in order to sell.

Assuming that the State Department is powerless to intervene to prevent the spread of practices that jeopardize its reciprocal tariff program, other legal remedies can certainly be applied to put a stop to boycotting activities. The letter addressed to brewers by officials of the union, advising them that their members would not handle malt shipments without a union label, is equivalent to a secondary boycott of all dealers in imported malt. The boycott is admittedly an illegal weapon of coercion against which injured persons are entitled to protection.

Unless some constructive agreement can be reached with the brewery workers, decisive action should be taken to force them to lift their boycott. No government can afford to have its foreign relations jeopardized by the dictatorial and extralegal actions of a single minority group.

A Flank Attack.

With only four dissenting votes the House has passed a resolution providing for an investigation of the financial activities of the promoters of old-age pension plans. While the inquiry purports to be general in character, the debate leaves no doubt that it is designed to check the spread of the Townsend movement by showing that large profits have accrued to its promoters at the expense of the credulous masses. The bipartisan character of the committee which is to conduct the investigation emphasizes the fact that the Townsendites have become a real menace to candidates of both parties in communities where they hold a political balance of power.

Ordinarily the sound common sense of the electorate could be counted upon to defeat the efforts of the charlatan, or the deluded advocate of Utopian schemes, to gain a widespread hearing for his plans. But the prolonged depression has made the public an easy prey to organized propaganda that holds out a hope of security without personal effort.

If more members of Congress had bestirred themselves sooner to fight the Townsend proposals openly and courageously, by exposing the fallacies inherent in the scheme, it would not have gained such dangerous headway. A belated inquiry into methods of operation of an organization that has profited from the political cowardice of many legislators is a far from satisfactory method of attack, but it is, notwithstanding, an encouraging indication that the House is at last awake to the necessity of action.

Any Nation-wide organization which collects large sums from the public for the purpose of influencing legislation is a proper subject of official inquiry. When pertinent facts regarding the disposition of moneys received are withheld, investigation is all the more necessary. Complaints that such special inquiries savor of political persecution unless they are made to cover all organizations raising money to influence legislation are absurd. While any organization is subject to such examination, those which exercise most political pressure, and are most secretive about their financing, naturally invite preferred attention.

Although the inquiry into the methods of financing the Townsend propaganda is obviously intended as a flank attack upon the movement itself, it is nevertheless justified as a form of protection against a cruel exploitation of the ignorant and gullible. If the leaders of the movement have nothing to hide, they should be glad of the opportunity to render a full accounting of their activities.

A National Housing Program.

Seldom has the case for a national housing program been more effectively stated than in the address of Allie S. Freed, chairman of the Committee for Economic Recovery, before the North Central Building and Loan Conference in Chicago yesterday. As Mr. Freed emphasizes, the country's best opportunity to put idle men and idle capital to work is in large-scale home building. And as he maintains, this objective can be achieved only through the whole-hearted co-operation of Government, industry, labor and finance.

The socially-minded have long condemned the sordid housing conditions of one-third of the American people. The justice of this indictment is stressed by Mr. Freed when he says that our "miserable shacks, shanties, and unhealthy rows of flats and tenements . . . are a shameful reproach to a great Nation." But he does not leap from this demonstrable fact to the impractical conclusion that the Government should undertake to house all slum dwellers in impossibly expensive model communities. His criticism of the wretched conditions in which a great number of families live turns with no less effectiveness upon the wasteful and ineffective methods by which the Administration has attacked the problem.

Mr. Freed considers the present efforts in this field "opportunistic, inefficient and unrelated." "Promises," he says, "have been more often made than kept. If less effort were given to 'trial balloons,' internal, bickerings, and charges of greed and selfishness, more attention could be devoted to the development of a carefully planned public and private home building program."

Instead of encouraging stagnation by competition with private industry and finance, the Government is urged to inaugurate a three-fold plan: (1) To aid and promote home building by private enterprise; (2) To aid in providing an ample flow of home mortgage credit; (3) To develop in co-operation with State and local governments non-competitive projects —presumably the reclamation of slums. The job of promotion, Mr. Freed properly contends, should be assigned to the Department of Commerce, where all activities of a similar character are concentrated. Ballyhoo should be no part of the duties of Federal agencies assisting in the financing of homes.

Industry should contribute to the program, Mr. Freed, believes by reducing costs and by making home building a "real industry" comparable to the manufacture of automobiles. Private finance agencies, he said, may do their part by upholding high standards, providing plenty of credit on liberal terms, and reducing interest rates—both those paid to depositors and those charged against home owners. Labor ought to co-operate by reducing nominal hourly rates of pay in order to secure actually larger annual incomes. Mr. Freed makes this argument especially effective by pointing out that most of the houses built under this plan would be sold to wage-earners. By aiding in the reduction of costs, labor unions would not only provide more work but would further the acquisition of desirable homes by their own members.

The carefully planned housing program worked out by the Committee for Economic Recovery has been laid before the President. Undoubtedly its effective reasoning is influencing the discussion in Administration circles of a new housing program that should definitely break away from the costly blunders of the past. The curious fact is that there should still be so much hesitation as to the proper course to take.

Conduct For Conductors.

The book reviewers will be delighted to hear that a work of literature has just been issued which contains no publisher's blurb, introduces no author hungry for acclaim, and does not even desire that mention in the public prints which for this reason we feel the more inclined to give. Although 20,000,000 Americans daily will be affected by its philosophy, the publication, like the old-time "White House spokesman," will keep out of sight.

This unique item, as the bibliophiles would put it, is sponsored by the American Transit Association, and is entitled "The Tactics of Transit Courtesy." The sub-title, "40 Ways To Please A Rider"—which must not be misinterpreted by District school teachers—opens the way to 40 rules which will inform the men who man our trolleys how to deal with 40 ticklish passenger problems. Providing for the man in the street car what Emily Post bestowed upon the chicken-salad devotee, this little work may be expected to place platform manners on a par with those of the parlor.

Under the new order, Chesterfieldian conductors must learn to take any rule from 1 to 40 and apply it firmly yet politely. Tempers, as well as trolleys, must be kept from slipping. And to maintain friction on icy tracks will be no more a duty than to avoid friction with heated passengers.

The Spanish Elections.

Spain's political pendulum has swung again and radicalism is once more in power. In the five years since the monarchy was overthrown, both Right and Left have had a fling at governing.

At the first elections under the new republic, a predominantly Socialist coalition won control, pledged to a program that included the enfranchisement of women and the separation of Church and State. But the women's vote proved their undoing. Within two years, the Leftists were thrown out and an "Accion Popular" of the extreme Right took over, favoring an authoritarian state of a distinctly monarchist flavor. Political stalemate was broken by the radical uprising in October, 1934, suppressed only after considerable bloodshed. Now, after 16 months of continual cabinet reorganization, the tables have been turned. Manuel Azana of the Left has once more been named premier.

Unlike radicals in this part of the world, the Spanish Socialists, Communists, Anarcho-Syndicalists and Liberal Republicans have found little difficulty in making common cause against the Conservatives. This should not lead to the conclusion that harmony will necessarily rule when the Cortes reassembles next month. It was made clear throughout the campaign that the alliance is only a "tactical expediency" necessitated by a real or fancied threat of returning fascism. That a "state of alarm" was ordered during the polling, wherever an out-and-out "state of war" had not been proclaimed, is suggestive of the uneasy mood of the country. Thirteen were killed during the election and frontier roads bore many a frightened aristocrat and former official out of the land as the first ballots indicated the swing of the pendulum.

In part, this tempestuousness can be explained by the republic's youth. Diego Riviera's military dictatorship, modeled closely on Italy's fascism, came to an end only in 1931—a day when the rest of the world was veering toward anything except democracy. But Spain, with heartening contrariness, took democracy to its bosom. The present boast of one of the victorious Marxists that the first step has been achieved toward a "socialist state exactly like Soviet Russia" need not indicate even the beginning of the end of democracy in Spain. Certainly, in a country that can produce political thinkers of the caliber of Ortega y Gasset, Salvador de Madariaga and Migel de Unamuno, it would be doubly tragic should democracy go under.

Another Mother's Day.

Here in America, of course, everybody remembers—once a year—those lines by Ann Taylor:

> Who ran to help me when I fell,
> And would some pretty story tell,
> Or kiss the place to make it well?
> My Mother!

That is the kind of people we Americans are: soft and sentimental. But what saccharine adulterant has been diluting the fluid iron which used to tingle through Soviet veins? A cable from Kharkov to the New York Times announces that the Bolshevik "Working Women's Day" will this year "be made virtually a Mother's Day, such as is observed in bourgeois countries."

Disillusioning as it seems, the commissars are doubtless ordering white carnations for their lapels. Perhaps there lies right now on Postmaster General Farley's desk a request for the loan of the die of the Whistler postage stamp. Almost to a certainty the Telegraphic Bureau is preparing Mother's Day greetings dispatchable (at ten roubles the ten words or under) to any address in the U. S. S. R.: "May Lenin bless you!—Even the class war means less to me than maternal love!" or, "If ever I forget you, may I forget Economic Determinism!"

As for Ann Taylor's little effusion, slightly pirated it should be able to meet all Bolshevik requirements:

> Who read me Marx ere I could spell,
> Who'd Engels' bedtime stories tell,
> Who taught me property is Hell?
> My Mother!

Dreams Of Empire.

From the Dallas Morning News.

Nazi government, nothing if not practical, turns its attention to Africa. The reason is obvious. The menace of Japan is over Asia and the Pacific and it is a serious question whether any western power can hold on under the frown of that empire. Africa has no Nippon. The present disturbed situation is an open invitation to the opportunist to assert his claims. Hitler, so far, is an opportunist blessed by fortune.

Great Britain is reported to be giving serious consideration to German claims. In the troubled state of international relationships, adjustment is not impracticable or impossible, seeing that the stir of nationalism in Germany looks only at the map of 1914.

Senator Pittman's Speech.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The country should be grateful to Senator Pittman for not mincing words in speaking of Japan. It is a welcome relief from the pussyfooting diplomacy of the State Department to have a prominent man puncture the Japanese propaganda and show up the Japanese government as a treaty-breaking militarism bent on conquest. It is unfortunate, however, that neither the Senator nor Congress has thought through the matter to its logical conclusion. As your able editorial of February 11 pointed out, the implication of the Senator's speech is that the United States should distinguish between aggressors and the victims of definable aggression, and should pass no neutrality legislation which would prevent us from penalizing the aggressor.

It is unfortunate, also that Congress seems to be going off half-cocked in the matter of Army appropriations. The Japanese policy, as Senator Pittman points out, has included intimidation of pacifists in the United States by making them feel war may be imminent; but surely a calm examination of the situation shows two points. The first point is that Japan has no intention of attacking the United States in this generation. Her present policy is to keep America quiet by propaganda while she consolidates her position in Asia by the conquest of eastern Siberia and China. When Japan has looted the resources of all eastern Asia and can draw soldiers and supplies from a population of 500,000,000, the United States will indeed be in danger, but that is many years hence. Present expenditures to meet that danger are sheer waste.

The second point is that, whether the war comes prematurely from the standpoint of the Japanese or only after they have consolidated their Asiatic conquests, if the United States has an adequate Navy and an adequate air force it does not need and cannot use a large Army. We can never transport an army to Asia. If our Navy and air force are not adequate, the United States will need not an Army of 150,000, but an Army of 1,500,000.

Comments On Blantonism.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I cannot refrain from writing to congratulate you on your editorial of February 18, entitled "Blantonism Scores a High," and especially the closing paragraph in which you say there should be "a speedy transfer of Mr. Blanton to some post where he need not spend 12 hours, nor even 12 seconds, a day in further obstructing Washington's progress."

I am a native Texan but have resided in Washington for a number of years, during which time I have heard many complaints and much condemnation of Mr. Blanton's practices, and especially his attitude toward the city of Washington. Mr. Blanton is entitled to the benefit of the doubt in some instances, perhaps, but his hostile attitude toward the efforts being made to secure appropriation of funds to carry on necessary work among the sick and suffering of the city is reprehensible; and I want to assure you that he is not "representing" the people of Texas when he assumes an attitude such as he did at the mass meeting last Sunday.

In making my appeal to Mr. Blanton not to turn a deaf ear to this particular plea, I did so as a Texan entitled to vote, and in position to influence certain votes in my native State; but frankly, he is apparently neither interested in representing the State responsible for his being in Congress, nor that helpless mass of suffering humanity for which funds are so badly needed. He seems more interested in keeping himself in the limelight with his fist and mouth than in making himself a credit to the largest State in the Union, and its people who have so implicitly relied on his integrity and principles that they have continued to send him back to Congress from time to time.

I should like to mention here, however, that this overt act of Mr. Blanton's is being "broadcast" to his constituents in Texas with the earnest hope that those who hold the reins of politics in that Sate will see to it that Texas is no longer disgraced in the manner it has been by this last outburst of indignity and vituperation from Mr. Blanton toward Washington and the medical profession here.

(MRS.) E. B. STOUT.
Washington, Feb. 19.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Representative Blanton, in his remarks at the mass meeting last Sunday, stated that the high tuberculosis death rate in San Antonio is due to the large Negro and Mexican population of that city. The truth demands reply to such a statement. Since the Negroes in San Antonio constitute only a very small per cent of the total population of the city (7.8 in 1930), it can be seen that deaths among them could hardly affect the total death rate to any appreciable extent without their speedy extermination.

San Antonio, on account of its mild climate, is a most popular resort for tubercular-afflicted persons, who come from various parts of the United States and from foreign countries. A goodly number of these succumb to this disease while in San Antonio, and this, in part, results in a high death rate from this disease for the city.

Since Mr. Blanton hails from a "neck o' the woods" hundreds of miles from San Antonio, he is quite ignorant of these and other facts concerning the city; but his ignorance should not prevent him from seeking information before making such false or "blantonized" statements, which, however, are quite typical and expected of him.

Mr. Blanton also stated that either San Antonio or Washington may become his future home, but I can assure him that such action on his part will not be the result of the wishes or desires of even a minority of the citizens of either city.

As to the duration of our tolerance, may I ask "How long, O, Lord, how long?" SANANTONE.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It may be the business of a paper to print news, but the actions of Texas Tom can never be news. That he is defending the Treasury is a horse laugh to one who knows the incompetents he maintains at the taxpayers' expense.

To remove this personality from any connection with public life would be a good deed performed.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The people of the District of Columbia furnish seven-eighths of the revenue needed to run the city government of Washington; Congress furnishes the other one-eighth and does all the governing.

The State of Texas, 1,000 miles away, furnishes, perhaps, one-fiftieth of the one-eighth, or one-four-hundredth of the amount. The Godforsaken Seventeenth District of Texas furnishes perhaps one-twenty-fifth of the one-fiftieth of the one-eighth. The Representative of the Godforsaken district of the Godforsaken State furnishes perhaps one-ten-thousandth of the one-twenty-fifth of the one-fiftieth of the one-eighth, and does all the bossing, makes all the gentlemen's agreements, and does all the hell-raising.

Negro Social Work.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Last August the little town of Falls Church was alarmed by a most brutal murder of an aged, harmless recluse, presumably for his small hoard of money. A colored man confessed to being accessory, but charged a white man with whom he had been associated in various ways with being the planner of the crime and chief killer of the old man. Largely because of the conflicting and mentally unsound statement of the colored man, and despite the strong circumstantial evidence pointing to the truth of his charges, the jury found the white man not guilty.

That the judge in the case referred the confessed accessory to the State hospital for mental examination was good judgment and mercy. All who knew the colored man had for a long time known of his deterioration from a hard-working, industrious citizen to a mentally and physically unsound individual.

The truth is that the separateness of the social and civic life of the two races in Virginia is so complete that only contagious diseases are considered seriously as matters of concern by whites. Many Negroes who should be in hospitals for the sane or for the insane never get treatment unless some untoward social act is the causation.

In the late war the writer knew three colored men of unsound minds who had at times been in hospitals for the insane, but who were drafted and served during the war. They were social menaces then. One was killed in the war. One is still considered a harmless phobiac, and one came to Washington to live, and later horribly mutilated and killed an apartment house custodian, for which he was sent to the hospital for criminally insane. Is it strange, therefore, to find that these unfortunate mentally undeveloped or mentally sick individuals are involved occasionally in some heinous and revolting crime, although this factor is seldom played up for public consumption? Luckily for society, many of these individuals soon find themselves in chain gangs and jails, and sooner or later in some hospital.

Except for the ministrations of their own church workers and of their martyr school teachers—who live on almost starvation wages—there is no social work for this underprivileged native colored Virginian other than through the Federal grants of dole. Is there any wonder they flock to the Capital of the greatest Nation in the world for education, recreation and bread?

Optimistically, however, the new school curriculum in Virginia is affording some studies in social understanding and tolerance, even to the mixing of races in experimental schools in Virginia, that bodes good for a higher social order in the future.

The Post Impressionist

"Winter Of Our Discontent."

Post Office, Friday.

WE are worried about the European situation. If you care to know why, turn back a few days to the Associated Press dispatch from Paris which chronicles a significant discussion by the French Cabinet and the assertion of French General Niessel that there's a German army in "the demilitarized Rhineland zone."

* * *

Oh, yes: the dispatch-writer calls this Teutonic army "an alleged force," so he may consider it really a weakness. Nevertheless, the General has no doubts: "He declared that the German forces had been camouflaged as constabulary detachments."

So this paper printed the statement—and it is sad news. Whittier, being a Yankee poet, could write:

"Of all sad words of tongue or pen,
The saddest are these: 'It might have been!'"

And that sadness was surpassed when, Benjamin Butler running for the Presidency on the Greenback ticket, one of his opponents averred:

"Of all sad words of tongue or pen,
The saddest are 'We might have Ben.'"

But today:

"Here's something more than meets our ken,
However camouflaged it's ben."

Nor is that all of the mystery: The dispatch says that the General says these Germans "are a highly mobile force with military garrisons." Who garrisons the forces or who forces the garrisons he either won't reveal or doesn't know; but he darkly hints that the French, as well as the Germans, are ready with war engines as yet unknown to peaceable people like us; he says those Rhineland forces are "equipped with armored cars as well as all services necessary for a lightning-fast army." "So rapidly has military mechanization developed in Europe that armored cars are no longer considered necessary to speed.

And then that cabinet action: "The French Cabinet discussed yesterday the reported occupation of the Rhineland by German troops after Pierre Etienne Flandin had outlined the possible steps France and Great Britain are prepared to take if an 'open' violation of the zone occurs."

You think that means:

"After Pierre Etienne Flandin had outlined the possible steps France and Great Britain are prepared to take if an 'open' violation of the zone occurs, the French Cabinet discussed the reported occupation of the Rhineland by German troops."

But don't jump to conclusions.

It might be a matter of omitted punctuation:

"The French Cabinet discussed yesterday the reported occupation of the Rhineland by German troops, after Pierre Etienne Flandin had outlined the possible steps. France and Great Britain are prepared to take, if an 'open' violation . . ."

No, that wouldn't do. Pierre Etienne Flandin is no traitor. Besides, such a version leaves "take" too ominously without an object. What is it that "France and Great Britain are prepared to take?" The Rhineland?

Perhaps, in diplomatic grammar, the verb "to outline" is an intransitive verb of the full significance of which this columnist is ignorant:

"After Pierre Etienne Flandin had outlined, the French Cabinet yesterday discussed the reported occupation of the Rhineland by German troops (and) the possible steps France and Great Britain are prepared to take if an 'open' violation of the zone occurs."

Or perhaps "reported" is used in its occasional, and dubious, sense of "threatened"—perhaps "occurs" is a pardonable slip of the typewriter for "occur"—"has" for "had" in the sense of "shall have." Then we should get the following:

"The occupation of the Rhineland by German troops—threatened to occur after Pierre Etienne Flandin shall have outlined the possible steps France and Great Britain are prepared to take if an 'open' violation of the zone occurs—was discussed yesterday by the French Cabinet."

Again—still keeping it in mind that common misuse of "reported" for "threatened"—may not the Germans fear "an 'open' violation of the zone" by the French?

"After Pierre Etienne Flandin had outlined the possible steps France and Great Britain are prepared to take, the French Cabinet discussed yesterday the occupation of the Rhineland by German troops, which is reported (threatened) if 'open' violation of the zone occurs."

For our own part, we have come to the conclusion that what the Germans are reported to have done is merely to have accepted a challenge: "The French Cabinet discussed the reported occupation of the Rhineland by German troops after Pierre Etienne Flandin had outlined 'the possible steps France and Great Britain are prepared to take if open violation of the zone occurs.'" If this doesn't mean that those Teutons occupied the Rhineland only after Pierre Etienne Flandin had dared them to do so, it just doesn't mean anything more than Gertrude Stein or James Joyce.

Fair Enough

Garmisch-Partenkirchen, Feb. 20.

WELL, friends, as I have nothing else to do I thought I would drop you a few lines about seeing Adolf Hitler, Goebbels and Goering and Streicher and all the soldiers and fireworks at the Olympics. After all, a man is only a man, and all of us have seen millions of men, so the excitement of seeing Hitler is not due to anything in his physical appearance but to his record.

So far as his appearance goes, it is not hard to imagine him back at his old trade, standing on a scaffold painting the side of a house, but we know the man who now stands on a reviewing platform receiving the patriotic and personal adulation of more than a hundred thousand Germans is a tremendous power, and it makes your flesh squirm on your bones to reflect that a nod or a shake of his head can start a war that would kill millions of men or prevent a war and spare their lives.

All this power resides in the person of a man who weighs about 200 pounds and wears a belted down leather overcoat and a brown military cap and smiles much more than you would expect him to. He has rather heavy eyelids, and from the set of his mouth under his small mustache it would seem that he had his share of trouble with his teeth.

• • • •

HE HAS the indoor pallor of the man who spends much of his time at his desk, and on this occasion at least he did not compare with Mussolini of Italy as a showman, but it must be considered that he was trying not to steal the show from the athletes, whereas Mussolini when I saw him in action was putting on his act and whooping up a great crowd of Italian peasants to a creamy froth.

They spent more than an hour screaming "Doo-chay!" "Doo-chay!" and some of them became so hysterical that tears ran down their faces, for Mussolini was telling them what great fighters they were. Hitler, on the other hand, was present in the character of the friendly, reliable leader of the German people and the savior who delivered them from the slavery imposed on them by Clemenceau and David Lloyd George come to join them in the pleasure of a sporting carnival.

Below the review balcony one little girl persisted in crying "Heil!" after the crowd had given the salute, and Cen. Goering, minister of the air force and prime minister of Prussia, called Hitler's attention to her, at which he looked down, singled her out and honored her with an individual salute of his hand and an undivided smile for her alone.

• • • •

IT WAS a strange thing that although Hitler's presence always brought a great turnout of military power, jammed up traffic and completely obscured the peaceful ideal to which the games were dedicated, the great man himself was easily approached by many strangers as he sat in his low box at the hockey rink watching the game in which Canada licked the United States, and gave his autograph to a hundred or more as willingly as Babe Ruth and in astonishing contrast to the ill-tempered refusals of Col. Lindbergh and Greta Garbo.

And with so much soldiery lending their presence to the scene along the road, thus creating an odor of menace and mystery, there was a temptation to speculate on the chance that an assassin would have had inside the arena. Hitler sat in full view, without uniformed guards, and it seemed that almost anyone on his side of the place was free to walk up and thrust an autograph book in his hand.

Autograph books are very promiscuous, and there may have been some among those proffered by the American athletes which contained the signature of Prof. Einstein or Max Baer.

• • • •

BUT people who become proficient in conniving and scheming often outsmart themselves, and we had a fine example of that in the official Nazi Olympic Press Bureau when a document was placed in all the letter boxes urging the journalists to send out propaganda against the government of Czechoslovakia.

You should have seen the face on Dr. Harsker, chief of the bureau, when one of our crowd told him about receiving his circular and asked him what the hell. He said it was all a great mistake—and I will say so, too. Nobody but the official Nazi personnel had access to those letter boxes, and my information is that the circulars were intended only for German reporters and that some dumb bloke balled up his instructions.

The fireworks up on the mountain at the closing exercises were a beautiful display of color, and the military searchlights washed the snowy hills in an artificial moonlight as the batteries of 3-inch guns banged away in a concealed position halfway up the slope, reminding us all that the beautiful Olympic flame, which was now dying slowly on the tower, was only a light, after all, and didn't mean a thing.

The Germans were realists about the Olympic flame, realizing that the athletes of the nations now uniting in the brotherhood of sport might be called on to carve one another's hearts out almost any minute. They didn't bother to pretend the flame was a supernatural thing kindled on the mountainside by the God of Love. It was merely a theatrical prop put there to adorn a show, and the gas pipe which fed the fire was plainly visible beneath.

Threats to Governor Bring 10-Yr. Sentence

Biloxi, Miss., Feb. 20 (AP).—Forrest Stuckey, 20, a Marion County farmer, was sentenced today by Federal Judge John McDuffie to ten years' imprisonment for sending an extortion letter to Gov. Hugh L. White of Mississippi. Stuckey pleaded guilty to the charge and accepted sentence.

The letter demanded the payment of $3,000 under a death threat.

North China Diplomacy

Japanese War Office Overrides Foreign Office's Word.

By Frank H. Hedges.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Tokyo.

IN almost any other country but China, if the military attache of a supposedly friendly power engaged in such activities and made such speeches as has Maj. Gen. Rensuke Isogai during the past fortnight, his recall would be asked for immediately, and it is quite probable that an official apology would also be demanded. It might even be that the government to which his Ambassador was accredited would intimate that that Ambassador was no longer "acceptable," and it is also quite possible that even more drastic steps might be taken.

Japan recognizes China as an independent power and likewise recognizes the Nanking regime as the legal government of that power. There is a Japanese Ambassador to China and a Chinese Ambassador to Japan. All diplomatic negotiations, according to international usage, should be conducted between one or the other of these Ambassadors with one or the other of these governments.

Apparently Tokyo considers China to be in a different category from any other nation and that different usages are justified there. How else can Maj. Gen. Isogai's activities and public statements be accounted for? He has just held conversations with the Chinese Minister of Foreign Affairs, Gen. Chang Chun, and with the president of the Executive Yuan, Gen. Chiang Kai-shek, to whom he outlined Japan's China policy and warned that China must accept it.

This was followed by a two and a half hour "frank and full" talk with Sir Frederick Leith-Ross, high economic adviser to the British government and now in China on a special mission, regarding various Far Eastern questions, including Great Britain's China policy. He then sailed for home to report the results of these conversations and to receive any fresh instructions that may be given. He will report to the War Office, not the Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

• • • •

THE official spokesman of the Foreign Office here acknowledged, when questioned, that he was not informed of the contents of the conversations between Sir Frederick and the Japanese military attache. All that was given to the press following them was that Maj. Gen. Isogai had fully and frankly presented Japan's views on British policy in the Far East as well as on Japanese affairs in China. When it is remembered that there is unquestioned and undisguised resentment in Japan at the present time toward Great Britain's China policy, it becomes even more bewildering that an army officer, as such, should be empowered to carry on such conversations and that the Foreign Office spokesman is not even informed as to what he said. Downing Street, of course, knows.

There is a most excellent excuse for Japanese military officers in China dabbling in such matters in the Peiping-Tientsin area, for there it is done under the guise of seeing that the provisions of the Tangku Truce are carried out. The terms of that truce, which was hastily concluded by the Chinese when they feared Japanese soldiers might soon be at the gates of the ancient capital, have never been disclosed. It is rumored—and generally believed—that the Chinese government would fall if they were made known, that the Chinese people would not tolerate them.

Be that as it may, when Japanese military officers act in North China the Foreign Office answers the questions of American and European correspondents stationed here by saying that they are acting under the terms of the Tangku Truce and that, as this is a military agreement, the Foreign Office is not concerned therein.

This also makes possible the statement that there is no disagreement between the War Office and the Foreign Office on China policy. There is no disagreement because the latter falls in with and follows the lead of the former. Gone are the days when Japan's diplomats in Washington, in London and elsewhere assured foreign governments that such and such was the Tokyo government's policy, only to find their words disproved by events in the field, frequently within less than 24 hours. It is much simpler and less embarrassing to state that the War Office is acting under the terms of the still secret Tangku Truce. This brings about a "unity of policy" and the quite true statement that such unity exists.

• • • •

IT exists following each fait accompli, but it is more than suspected that at times even the War Office and the General Staff in Tokyo do not know that this or that action is to be taken by the troops in the field in both Manchukuo and North China until informed it has transpired. There are at least two distinct factions within army circles themselves, the policies of which frequently conflict.

Testimony being brought out in the court-martial of Lieut. Col. Aaburo Aizawa for the murder of his superior, Maj. Gen. Tetuzan Nagata, is putting the fact of this vehemently denied factionalism on official record for the first time. It may well be that many army officers will regret that Aizawa did not commit "honorable suicide" before standing trial ere he is sentenced—or acquitted. That is another story, to be told when all the testimony of the trial is available, just as the increasing Anglo-Japanese friction in China is a story in itself. Both are worthy of the closest attention.

Harris & Ewing.
SIR FREDERICK LEITH-ROSS.

The war office-foreign office unity exists also only after questions between them have been fought out first here in Tokyo, or when one meekly bows to the other, and there is no question of which is doing all of that bowing at the present time. Still another office of the government must needs be brought into line by the high military command, and that is the ministry of finance.

As long as the veteran and universally respected as well as courageous Korekiyo Takahashi holds this all-important portfolio, the army will not always get its way. Many a military man in Japan still adheres to the old Bushido principle that a samurai's balance sheet should always show a deficit, that along this path honor lies. But not so, the practical banker and financier, Mr. Takahashi. He is far more concerned with how to finance the Manchukuo and China ventures than with the principles of Bushido, and he has every non-military taxpayer in the empire behind him. Even a samurai must eat.

• • • •

THIS being the "unity of policy" as regards China, when the real state of affairs in North China is looked at it is surprising to find a very disunited Japanese policy there at present. This disunity is caused because of the conflicting and chaotic nature of the events actually taking place there.

Yin Ju-Keng has erected the East Hopei Anti-Communist government, which he declares to be independent of the Nanking government.

Confusion Of Parties In New 'Autonomy' Bewildering.

Gen. Sing Che-yuan heads the Hopei-Charhar Political Council, which declared the autonomy of North China but accepted appointment at the hands of Nanking when that government adroitly outwitted maneuvers for complete autonomy by taking this step, much to the chagrin of many Japanese. The Mongol Prince Teh has declared the autonomy (meaning independence) of Inner Mongolia, and Nanking is pursuing the same tactics by itself naming a committee similar to Gen. Sung's and investing it with autonomous powers.

The rumor of the erection of still another government, this time alleged to be communist in nature, in South Hopei set both Chinese and Japanese by the ears this week.

Each of these groups loudly proclaim its "China for the Chinese" principles and disavows any connection with the Japanese military, yet each is striving desperately against the others to get such support. It is all right and is good patriotism to recognize the de jure authority of Nanking, but it is simply good politics, a matter of bread and butter and a question of continuing in office, to recognize and play up to the de facto power and influence of the Japanese army in North China.

THE Japanese are naturally bewildered by this multiplicity of governments when it comes to backing one or the other, and have not yet decided just which one is "the voice of the Chinese people." For, of course, Japan would not think of promoting or engineering an autonomous (or independence) movement in North China itself. But neither can it be deaf to such a movement when the Chinese masses raise a shout therefore. What Japan would like to see, and is striving to achieve, is for all these conflicting groups to come together in one unified autonomous movement. Then it would be easy enough to distinguish the true voice of the masses.

In the meantime, Nanking may also be a little confused as to the voice of Japan. It knows that an ambassador from the Tokyo Foreign Office is accredited to China. It has recently changed its own ambassador to Tokyo, appointing a man known to be friendly to Japan, a member of the old Anfu Clique which was in power when the Nishihara loans were floated, Hsu Shih-ying. Nanking conducts conversations with the Japanese ambassador and listens to the Japanese minister of foreign affairs lay down his three famous priciples for China to act upon if it expects Japan's friendship, and then up bobs the Japanese military attache to talk to the Chinese Foreign Minister, to Gen. Chiang Kai-shek, and to Sir Frederick Leith-Ross, of London.

But all of this appears much more confusing to foreign observers and to the world at large than it does to either Tokyo or Nanking. They know the voice with authority behind it when they hear it. It might not be a bad idea to suspend all diplomatic trappings for a time and let Gen. Chiang Kai-shek and the dominant Japanese military faction get down to brass tacks. Something tangible might well result, whether it would be entirely satisfactory to both sides—or to either—or not.

It is the facts of the situation, as contrasted to its surface appearance, that is causing a chuckle to go the rounds of clubs and hotel lobbies in Tokyo at the sarcastic remark that Maj. Gen. Rensuke Isogai, military attache to the Japanese embassy to China, is shortly to be "demoted" to the post of Japanese ambassador to that country.

Another World

Regimented Hospital.

IT is very seldom that your correspondent finds himself in a hospital, but the other day he found himself wandering around that labyrinthine institution known officially as the Army Medical Center and colloquially as Walter Reed Hospital. This is a small city unto itself. It has its own police force, its own fire department, its own rules and regulations, and it is, perhaps, the perfect example of the Fascist state. Like Italy under Mussolini, it is clean; and if it had railroads, I am sure they would run on time.

Being an old smoke-eater at heart, while seeking the McMullen court-martial I was unable to resist stopping off at the firehouse. On the pretext of asking directions I chatted for a brief moment with the chief. Seems that all Army posts of any size have fire departments which are fully equipped with chemical units, motorized, which are tied up with the entire post by a fully developed alarm system. Walter Reed still has on its premises a number of wooden barracks left over from war days. These are potential fire traps, quite in contrast with the modern hospital buildings, which are mainly of colonial design in brick and which remind one of a Vermont boarding school.

In the fire station is a pumping engine and a chemical, and plenty of axes and ladders, and a well-trained crew, who look just like the tobacco-chewing, laconical gentry who play checkers in almost any municipal firehouse—Irish lads, as a rule, who turn into demons when the tapper starts clapping its alarm. They don't have much work to do, as a rule, but when anything happens they are on the job. If the blaze is beyond their combative abilities, however, they call upon the District to quench the flames, which, once again, is indication that this is analogous to a Fascist state.

• • • •

THE fire house is but a symbol of several hundreds of people living under a virtual dictatorship. All about them is the District, which is comparable to the world at large. There people live and work and play under the pleasant lack of restrictions of a democracy. But once they step upon the sacred ground of the Army Medical Center they are in a different world. Martial law rules; there is no democracy; arms are worn out in continual salute to those of higher rank; and God, the Constitution and the Flag are raised on high; and everyone lives a regimented life.

• • • •

IT is as if one were miles from the Georgia avenue car-line, kilometers from the bus that swerves on icy pavements and at great risk from Sixteenth street to Alaska avenue at ten minute intervals. The true, free-thinking and free-spitting American has no place here, and rugged individualism is anathema. Even the nurses, going from building to building, walk with their shoulders squared and no smile lighting their faces. Somewhere—I could not determine the exact spot—sits some Dictator, khaki clad, spurred and sabered, ruling this place with an iron hand. And this is all right—for this is an Army post, and no place for civilians with their laxity, their casual attitude upon that serious thing called Life.

Now this, of course, is nothing to disparage, for this is not your life, nor mine. But I could not help thinking, walking about the staid pathways, passing the armed guards, watching the regimented men driving their mules, how wearisome this all would be for us free spirits, who like to get up when we please, and do what we want, and act like those mythical people Mr. Hoover used to prate about. And then I got to wondering whether we were not, perhaps, upon the verge of a spreading of the Army post discipline to the rest of the country. Censorship of movies, banning of books, imposition of little red riders, teachers' oaths, and all that . . .

• • • •

BUT I laughed this off, because Walter Reed Hospital is so clean and neat and orderly. Just like the traveler laughs off Mussolini because there is no garbage in Venice and the trains run to Rome on schedule. And I would have forgotten all about it had I not, on my return to the lackadaisical life of democracy on E street, got to talking with an old newspaperman who knew this town when I was a little lad.

"Son," he said, "so you think the Army Medical Center is a brief idea of what a Fascist state might be like, eh?"

Having been looking over my shoulder, what could I do but say to him, "Yes, don't you?"

And he, the old warhorse, said:

"Do I? Say, son, you talk about their firehouse, but if they have a conflagration, see how quick they call for Mr. Schrom. And if the boys get out of hand, just listen to the police radio bleat and blast for aid. 'S just like Germany or Italy. You can't—what do the editorial writers call it?—oh, yeah, be sufficient unto yourselves. Nope, there's more to the world than your own back yard.

"And by the way. Speaking of dictatorships and Fascist states, were you ever sent out to Walter Reed to get a story? No? Well, if you were you'd know what Herr Goebbels means. Say, there ain't no tougher place I know of to break through censorship than there."

All of which has no moral. Even the author of "It Can't Happen Here" sailed for Bermuda yesterday.

Arms Group Is Told Air Firms Paid Gardner Fees of $75,000

Former Democratic Committeeman Hired as Counsel for Industry Because of His 'Influence,' Closing Session of Senate Inquiry Hears.

By the Associated Press.

The Senate munitions investigation closed a 20-month run as the Capital's foremost show last night with a final curtain disclosure that for the value of his political influence, the aircraft industry retained O. Max Gardner, former Democratic national committeeman from North Carolina, as its counsel.

This development capped a reluctant tale by three collectors of old—but not too old—machne guns, revealing how these and other firearms are bought by the pound from the Army, reconditioned and sold to South America revolutionists or their governments at a bulging profit.

In addition, the final day's testimony included evidence that some airplane manufacturers are accustomed to paying "squeeze" money in selling their product abroad; that this is necessary if their proposals are even to receive the consideration of government officials.

With the committee engrossed in a discussion of the problem of a lack of laws governing the distribution of firearms, the Senate enacted and sent to the House a measure intended to fill that need, partially at least, by prohibiting interstate shipment of such implements except to licensed dealers.

The Gardner disclosure came with introduction of a letter written by James P. Murray, eastern representative of Boeing Aircraft Co., to C. L. Egtvedt, president of the Boeing company and executive committee member of the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce, saying:

"Max Gardner, special counsel employed shortly after the cancellation of the air mail contracts, was paid $75,000.

"This year he will remain for $25,000, which item is included in the budget. Personally I feel that Gardner can be of more help during this session of Congress, in order to get proper air mail legislation, than he has been to the industry during the past 10 or 11 months.

"He came into the piteure after the damage had been done. He is a politician of the first water and my observations tell me that in this Administration, in order to get things done, resort simply has to be made to the use of politics.

"Therefore, Gardner, as counsel for the Chamber, I feel, will be more valuable during the present session of Congress than he has been since the cancellation of air mail contracts last February."

The letter was presented without comment by Stephen Raushenbush, chief committee investigator, and Murray, on the stand at the time, volunteered the information that while he was retained for 1935, his connection with the Chamber had ceased.

Gardner, a former Governor of North Carolina, resigned from the Democratic committee early in 1934, shortly after which President Roosevelt sought to purge the committee of members doing a law business in Washington and holding membership in the committee as well.

Boeing correspondence also showed an ambitious Oriental agent of the company selling planes to the Cantonese, China government, and then seeking orders from its rival the government at Nanking. Raushenbush asserted, while Murray denied, that this amounted to playing one faction against the other for the sake of increased sales.

In addition to Murray and other representatives of aircraft companies the day's principal witnesses were:

Jacob Paley, round-faced, quick-spoken young purveyor of milliners' equipment, with a nice sideline in instruments of death, who bought more than 3,000 old Army machine guns at about 12 cents apiece and sold them for "souvenirs" until he discovered that they could be made serviceable.

Reginald F. Sedgley, known to some in the trade—to his own distaste—as "Sidewalk Sedgley," who reconditioned some of Paley's weapons at his famous gunsmithing plant in Philadelphia, and who, in partnership with Paley, later bought some more old firearms.

Frank Bannerman, ashen, saturnine head of Francis Bannerman & Sons, a firm that for years has been retailing Sedgley's reconditioned weapons, selling mostly to individuals, he said, and shipping by express.

"Gangster never buys a gun," Sedgley asserted. They raided our place four times in three months back in 1926. They drove up in trucks, broke in and took their choice."

"What did they get?"

"They took nothing but high-powered stuff—machine guns, high-powered rifles, sawed-off shotguns. They went through the plant and picked out ammunition for them, too."

"Did you notify the police at once?"

"Yes, sir."

"Were any of the items ever recovered?"

"Never a one. We put in an effective burglar alarm and haven't been bothered since."

Britain Is Granted Delay for Mackay

San Francisco, Feb. 20 (AP).—The British government won a reprieve recommendation today from the California Supreme Court for Alexander MacKay, 29-year-old Scotsman, under sentence to hang February 28.

The court recommended to Gov. Frank F. Merriam that MacKay's execution be delayed until the United States Supreme Court acts on the appeal of Joe Kristy, a partner of MacKay in a sensational kidnaping and prison break at San Quentin Penitentiary.

He and MacKay were sentenced to death for kidnaping with violence members of the State prison board during the break last year. A decision is expected March 2.

Gov. Merriam previously said he would be guided by the Supreme Court's recommendation.

The British government interceded through Consul General Cyril Cane. He questioned the legality of the death sentence, pointing out the prison board members were not kidnaped for ransom. He contended the California law, making kidnaping with violence punishable by death, did not apply. MacKay was serving a robbery sentence from Los Angeles at the time of the break.

Italo-German Alliance Seen Threat to Peace

European Diplomats Anxiously Await Result of Negotiations.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Feb. 20.—The possibility of an Italo-German rapprochement became the center of interest for diplomats tonight as Ulrich Von Hassell, Germany's Ambassador to Italy, left for Rome after his second conference in five days with Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler.

Belief was expressed in diplomatic circles that Hitler and Premier Mussolini were discussing, through Von Hassell, the possibility of Italy taking reprisals against France by withdrawal as a guarantor of the Locarno Pact if oil sanctions were voted against Italy.

Von Hassell had flown here after a conference with Fulvio Suvich, Italian undersecretary for foreign affairs.

German officials declined to discuss the reasons for the ambassador's flying trips, and ignored reports from Italy that Hitler and Mussolini were seeking an agreement regarding independent Austria.

Italy Silent on Pact.

Regarding the Locarno Pact, diplomats pointed out that France and Great Britain have informed Hitler of their intention to abide by it in case the demilitarized Rhineland zone were violated, but that Italy, another principal guarantor, has said nothing since the Ethiopian campaign began.

(By the Locarno agreement, drawn up in 1925, Germany, Belgium, France, Great Britain and Italy guarantee the peace in Western Europe, especially on the German-French and German-Belgian borders.)

If Italy withdrew from the pact, some diplomats said, the agreement would be weakened and Hitler's risk would be lessened if he desired to send troops into the demilitarized zone.

In these quarters belief was also voiced that Hitler and Mussolini were discussing a common policy regarding Italy's and Germany's demands for treaty revision against the French and English "stand-pat" viewpoint, in connection with possible changes in the league of Nations.

Diplomats Watch Situation.

Rome, Feb. 20 (AP).—Despite press ministry assurances that a sudden burst of Italo-German-Austrian-Polish conversations were "normal," diplomats watched tonight for new European alignments to counterbalance the British-French-Russian front.

Premier Mussolini, who talked with Ambassador Alfredo Wysocki, of Poland, last night, received a full report today from Fulvio Suvich, his undersecretary for foreign affairs, concerning conversations that official had with Ambassador Ulrich von Hassell, of Germany, and Egon Berger Waldenegg, foreign minister of Austria.

Ambassador Wysocki returned to Poland; Ambassador von Hassell went to Berlin; Berger Waldenegg went to Vienna.

German sources in Rome said that Reichsfuehrer Hitler was responsible for initiating the Italo-German diplomatic exchanges. (Sources close to Hitler in Berlin, however, denied that the German leader was responsible.)

Spanish Soviet Aim of Leftists; Riots Continue

Socialists Will Withhold Support From Azana, Spokesman Says.

By the Associated Press.

Madrid, Feb. 20.—The government, faced with increasing disorders by Leftists jubilant over their election victory, decided tonight to call a special meeting of the permanent parliamentary commission to determine the advisability of decreeing general amnesty to all political prisoners.

Well-informed sources said the decree probably would be drafted tomorrow and signed Saturday, becoming effective immediately on publication in the official gazette.

Victorious Leftists continued to spread disorder throughout the country in disturbances directed against Catholics and Rightists. Attempts were made to burn several churches and convents and one more man was killed.

Martial Law in State.

The province of Cordoba was placed under a state of war and assaults were made on religious headquarters at Alacante, Valencia, Seville, Barcelona, Palma Del Rio and Villa Del Rio.

In the midst of the celebrations came a prediction from Socialist leaders that establishment of the new government was a stepping stone to a Spanish soviet.

They said they hoped to be able to achieve a "union of Iberian Soviet Republics" within the next five years.

To Withhold Aid.

A high personage of the Socialist Party stated privately that the Socialists have no intention of giving Manuel Azana, the new premier, the same degree of co-operation which they granted him in the early days of the republic, when he first was head of the cabinet.

The Socialist Party, said this personage, entered the Leftist front which put Azana back into power only "as a means of assuring the downfall of the Rightist dictatorship" and now plans to proceed vigorously with its own program.

The party's objective, he said, is "to overthrow the present form of Spanish democracy and set up a union of Iberian Soviet Republics which will embrace all Spain and possibly Portugal."

District Citizens Have No Vote, But Poll Gives Some a Chance to Register Their Choice

TRANSIENT.—Unemployed "for more'n five years," Lawrence Gernhaber, Morrisville, Pa., believes Senator Borah, of Idaho," can help put me back to work."

PLAYGROUND INSTRUCTOR.—Miss Nell Clements, Silver Spring, Md., is one of those who believe Gov. Landon of Kansas will be named as the Republican nominee for the Presidency.

BUSINESS MAN.—"Landon, of course!" Don W. Slauson, of Slauson, White & Rowe, investment securities, says emphatically. "No other Republican has a chance."

HOUSEWIFE.—Mrs. Gloria Purdy, 1460 Euclid street northwest, hopes Herbert Hoover will be the choice of the G. O. P. convention. "Hoover's the man for the job," she said.

BUYER.—Miss Frances B. Goodacre, of the Hecht Co., prefers Knox, of Illinois, as the standard bearer for the Republican party. Knox, publisher and business man, is ideally suited for the office, she believes.

TAXI-DRIVER.—"Landon of Kansas will be the Republican nominee!" Harold D. Jones, 2125 P street northwest, thinks. "Only Landon can balance the Federal budget."

Roosevelt vs. ???

LAST NOVEMBER, a Nation-wide poll by the American Institute of Public Opinion found Gov. Landon of Kansas and Senator Borah, of Idaho, running neck-and-neck as first choice among Republican voters for the G. O. P. Presidential nomination. Former President Hoover, Col. Frank Knox, of Chicago; Senators Vandenberg, of Michigan, and Dickinson, of Iowa, followed behind the two leaders.

How do these six contenders for the Republican nomination stand today . . . in the estimation of voters the country over?

For the answer, see the results of the latest national poll by the American Institute of Public Opinion on the "America Speaks" page of this Sunday's Post.

LABOR FOREMAN.—John Ballenger, 502 D street northeast, a Pepco employe, thinks Borah, of Idaho, will be chosen by the Republican leaders as their Presidential nominee.

WAITRESS.—Miss Alga Hodges, 2710 Ontario road northwest, employed at Ceres Restaurant on E street northwest, is another Landon booster. She is firm in her belief that he will be the G. O. P. nominee.

POLICEMAN.—Herbert B. Hebb, 5320 Eighth street northwest, assigned to the traffic division of the Metropolitan Police Department, feels that former President Hoover is the logical man for the Republican nomination.

Bill by Wheeler Aims to Prevent Fixing of Prices

Measure Would Abolish Basing-Point System, Avert New Crash.

By the United Press.

Bills to prevent industrial price-fixing through operation of the basing point system of making quotations were introduced simultaneously yesterday in the House and Senate.

Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat) Montana, author of the Senate measure, issued a statement in which he said it is aimed at:

1. Abolition of the practice under which industries make uniform delivery prices and thus discriminate among purchasers by defraying substantially greater amounts of transportation charges in favor of certain customers than they defray in favor of other customers.

Aims at Buyer Exclusion.

2. Abrogation of practices whereby manufacturers exclude buyers and public from and obtain for themselves all the economic advantages of highway and water improvements.

3. Abrogation of methods of price fixing under which the consuming public is obliged to pay prices made higher than otherwise by a Nation-wide system of cross-hauling commodities.

4. Abrogation of price fixing by numerous industries.

"I have introduced the antibasing bill," Wheeler said, "largely for the reason that unless the situation can be taken in hand and price competition restored to American business, the country will barely escape from this depression before it will be submerged in another which may be more disastrous than that from which we are now emerging.

"Public Upheaval."

"There is no substitute for competitive prices. If each industry is allowed, through basing point systems, and other price-fixing devices to obtain something like a franchise, charge the public what it will, there will be a public upheaval through the stress of high prices and unemployment."

One result of the system, Wheeler said, is that manufacturers placed their base prices high enough to secure Nation-wide distribution at the one level.

He said they do not compete in price, but each has the benefit of entering the market territory of every other supposed competing concern, all quoting one price for each market location and no one making a competitive price by departing from the formula.

Roosevelt to Give Radio Talk Sunday

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt will talk briefly over the air from his Hyde Park, New York, home on Sunday night at 8 p. m. (Eastern standard time), as a part of the observance of Brotherhood Day sponsored by the National Conference of Jews and Christians.

Two other speeches are planned by the President, one at Temple University tomorrow and the other in April at a Jefferson Day dinner.

Because of a previous engagement by the President, however, the White House is suggesting to the National Democratic Club that its Jefferson Day dinner be postponed from April 18 to April 25 to permit the acceptance of the invitation extended to him yesterday.

Inquiry Asked on WPA's Story John Smith Sold Boy as Slave

American Guide Writer Asserts Incident Was Found in Old Paper; Virginians Urge Darden to Investigate Story.

The City of Norfolk, Va., is regarded as good New Deal territory. But when WPA boondogglers begin debunking Capt. John Smith, a Virginia hero, that is something else.

Recently the American Guide project of the Works Progress Administration, which is hiring unemployed writers to get out an American Baedekker, put out a news release describing Capt. Smith as "a soldier of fortune" and charging that he once sold a white boy as a slave to an Indian chief.

The Norfolk Advertising Board read the story and decided to take steps. Its president, Francis E. Turin, yesterday called on Senator Harry Flood Byrd and Representative Colgate W. Darden, jr., to protest to WPA about the story, charging that it libeled a romantic figure and was not warranted by the facts.

Extract From Article.

Headed "Sold Up The River," the WPA news release said:

"The first slave trade to be participated in by a British settler of America occurred a decade before Negroes from Africa were landed at Jamestown. The English participant was Capt. John Smith, who may thus be accredited with initiating the traffic here, and the slave was a white boy.

"We are likely to think of Capt. Smith as a romantic figure, because of the glamorous story of his rescue from death by the Indian princess Matoaka, or Pocahontas. All the world may love a lover, but Smith and the girl were not lovers. She was much younger than he and in rescuing him was very likely actuated by her general friendliness toward the British colonists.

"Although clever and brave, Smith was after all a soldier of fortune in a day when military adventurers still roamed Europe, sophisticated and ruthless, ready to take orders from the highest bidder. Hence, it was not out of character that he should have been the first European to sell a slave on our soil."

"Among Old Documents."

The story of this slave trade, the WPA writers then went on to say, was found "among old documents."

"Jamestown," the release continued, "was founded in 1607. One of the early supply ships sent to the colony from England carried a lad named Henry Spelman. He was as adventurous as Smith, whom he probably looked upon as his model. Perhaps it was with the desire of keeping close to his leader that he joined the party which Smith took with him on an expedition to the falls of the James River in 1609.

"At the falls, Smith found an Indian village governed by Taux (Little) Powhatan, son of the Emperor Powhatan and brother of Pocahontas. He thought that the site would be excellent for a white settlement and asked the chief to sell it to him. For the purpose of barter, Smith had brought with him a supply of beads and other inexpensive trinkets which the Indians usually were glad to get. Taux Powhatan, however, refused to sell his village site for such knick-knacks. Pressed to say what he would accept, he demanded the boy, Henry.

"The thought of selling into slavery to uncivilized Indians a fellow English citizen and a motherless boy under his care at that, might have been expected to fill Smith with repugnance. Quite the contrary. He accepted the chief's proposition with alacrity and delivered young Spelman to his owner.'

Representative Darden, who represents Norfolk in the House, is pretty well steeped in early Virginia history. Consequently he knows that Capt. John Smith was not altogether a rose, as the saying goes.

"I think it is well established,' he told The Post last night, "that Capt. Smith was a soldier of fortune. This, however, in no way detracts from his great contribution to the English colonial development of the New World.

"As for his being the first slave trader, I do not recollect ever having seen this maintained by any writers of early Virginia history.

"I have asked WPA to furnish me with the sources of their information. I am anxious to check it, both for my own information and because of the protests that have followed its publication."

The article about Capt. John Smith is only a minor part of a travel "handbook" that will run to five volumes.

Wilson Murder Suspects Face Court Tuesday

Four to Be Arraigned on Slaying Charge at Rockville.

The four accused murderers of Allen B. Wilson, newspaper route agent, will be arraigned Tuesday at 1:30 p. m. before the Montgomery County Circuit Court in Rockville, The Post learned last night.

A date for their trial will be set at that time. The prospect is that it will be held within two weeks.

Attorney General Homer Cummings has ruled, it was learned, that it will not be necessary for Montgomery County to extradite the murder suspects now held in Washington.

State's Attorney James H. Pugh, who will prosecute the case, yesterday wrote letters asking permission to "borrow" three of the prisoners for the arraignment.

One letter went to Cummings and concerned Albert McDermott, alias John (Slim) Dunn, who recently was returned here from Alcatraz Prison in San Francisco Harbor.

The other was addressed to Capt. M. M. Barnard, superintendent of District penal institutions. This asked permission to "borrow" Albert S. Sutton and Ernest Myers, now with McDermott in the District Jail.

State's Attorney Pugh made no mention in his letters of William Cleary, the fourth suspect in the Wilson case. This strengthened the belief that Cleary is the "mystery prisoner" now in the Rockville Jail.

Washington police have been saying that Cleary was held here in one of the precinct stations.

It also is believed that Dewey Jenkins, who will be the State's star witness, is in the Rockville prison.

When the four suspects are arraigned Tuesday, indictments charging them with the murder of Wilson—who was killed in the belief he was Edward (Mickey) McDonald, a local gambler—will be read to them, and they will be asked to plead guilty or not guilty.

The early trial of the alleged Wilson killers will be made possible by a delay in the trial of Anne Lyddane, charged with conspiracy to murder her husband, Frances (Slom) Lyddane.

U. S. Ownership Of Rails Called State Socialism

Rep. Fish Defends Private Control Before Transportation Club.

Government ownership of railroads was bitterly assailed last night by Representative Hamilton Fish, jr., New York, a Republican Presidential possibility, before the Washington Transportation Club.

"Government ownership of the railroads," he said, "would merely mean making a political football out of our transportation systems, and creating a tremendous bureaucracy at Washington.

"Federal ownership is the next step toward Socialism; in fact, is state Socialism.

At the Crossroads.

"We are at the crossroads, and have to decide whether to maintain our industrial system, based on private initiative and reasonable profit, or scrap it for foreign importations, whether of the Left or of the Right."

He praised American railroads for their achievements.

"The railroads of the country," he said, "have done more to build up America than any other agency. Under private control they have expanded with the population, and have been efficiently operated, so that today they are superior to any railroads in the world.

"They are entitled to make reasonable profits, to employ labor at American standards of wages, and to pay reasonable dividends. The American people today are with the railroads, and want them to have a square deal at the hands of the Government."

Numbers Offered.

After his address, several numbers were offered by the Baltimore & Ohio Glee Club, led by Ivan Servais, with Mrs. Charlotte Rodda Reed as accompanist.

Other music was furnished by Thelma Schilling's Cadettes, an all-girls' orchestra, including Dot Brown, Helen Norris, Margaret Ogden, Corinne Lincourt, Mildred Taylor and Sarah Kirstein.

Permits Use of Runway and Fixes Penalty for Drivers Ignoring Guard.

The Senate passed without debate yesterday the latest draft of a joint resolution to eliminate hazards on Military road, adjacent to Washington Airport, and the House is expected to accept the revision today or early next week.

Senator Duffy (Democrat), of Wisconsin, called up the bill worked out the day before by a Senate subcommittee of the Military Affairs Committee. It was approved by all factions concerned.

Chairman McSwain, of the House Military Affairs Committee, said he would confer with other members of his committee before deciding whether to accept the Senate measure or to ask for a conference.

"I guess it's as a good a solution as any," he said. "But what we need to do now is to get a permanent airport for the National Capital, one that will hold its own with the finest national airports in the world."

The Senate bill authorizes the National Airport Corporation to utilize a portion of Military road of connecting Washington Airport and Hoover Field by means of a temporary runway, but requires the airport owners to maintain a traffic patrol and whatever safeguards the Bureau of Air Commerce may direct.

A pealty up to $500 fine or six months imprisonment, or both, may be imposed by a United States commissioner court on any motorist who disobeys the airport's patrol.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

National Symphony Orchestra; Hans Kindler, conductor; Efrem Zimbalist, soloist; Constitution Hall Thursday afternoon. Program: "Kamarinskaya" (Glinka), "Romeo and Juliet" (Chaikovski), Violin Concerto in A minor (Glazunov), Berceuse and Finale from "Zhar Ptitza" Suite (Stravinski), Entr'acte from "Khovanshchina" (Musorgski), Polovetskian Dances from "Knaz Igor" (Borodin).

Dipping into the stream of Russian music from 1848 to 1910, this program afforded its auditors sundry samples of the Slavic imagination applied to folk customs, folk lore, romantic legend and history. Glinka's "Kamarinskaya," the tonal amplification of a village wedding, was the forerunner of many another rustic orchestral painting, and taught subsequent composers many a device for dressing up simple folk themes in the glittering vesture of instrumentation.

Borodin's Polovetskian dances, barbaric in rythms and uncouth in melodies, come from an opera based on actual events of the year 1185, and Musorgski's "Khovanshchina" deals with a historical situation in 1682. Of these two composers, Musorgski was by far the truer musician, the seer whose inner vision penetrated to the core of Russian idisyncrasy. His music has a racial authenticity that is unmistakable; it is in the very accent of the people. Borodin, having the scientist's mind and the analytic attitude, wrote in colder and more detached a manner, despite the superficial excitement of rhythm.

Chaikovski's symphonic poem is one of those tragic subjects to which his temperament drew him. Like his "Francesca da Rimini," it is concerned with the poignancies of romantic love in frustration. No such cries of anguish are to be found in the coolly manufactured music of Stravinski's ballet suite with its shimmering evocations of old fairy tales.

In the midst of all this picturesqueness, this parade of programmatic and stage music, the violin concerto stood out serenely in its loneliness as absolute music. Glazunov has always gone his own way, and is today what he has ever been, a pursuer of ideal beauty. Now and then he has given ear to the advocates of nationalism, but his heart has not been in that kind of writing.

Efrem Zimbalist played the concerto with calm and a dispassionate brilliance. His technical proficiency was flawless, but his tone was without warmth. One was moved not to the emotional sharing of an interpretation, but to admiration for the wizardry of his perfect harmonics.

Maestro Sidney Copies Styles Of Best Bands

Mayflower Leader Enlivens Night Spot With Imitations.

By Chanticleer.

Sidney of the Mayflower broke out this week with imitations of the ten leading dance bands, as selected in a radio poll. And to prove he knows his style, Sidney penned the following impressions:

Guy Lombardo: Simple, melodic arrangements, saxophones predominating.

Richard Himber: A very modern, stylish orchestra, using harp and violins over other instruments.

Horace Heidt: Another collegiate orchestra, much novelty and vocal decoration.

You can hear all the imitations—and Sidney's own band—in the Mayflower lounge just about any evening of the week.

Another series of amateur nights is to take off at the La Paree, with the fond hope of uncovering another Buddy Shaner. Preliminaries will be held for six weeks and the winner gets a week at the La Paree. You can register right now if you have a talent . . . From London to the Shoreham—that's Eleanor and Seymour Royce, with a new style of dancing. They really have something different: they exaggerate the conservativeness of ballroom dancing. No lifts, no turns in the air. They dance for "society" here but they're really "society" themselves when they're home. They dance for fun . . . Nadia and Natacha, Matt Windsor's new Club Volga Boatmen stars, practice 2½ hours every day. And it's made them successful. The girls were formerly members of the Fokine Ballet, played the Fox last year with that ensemble . . . Heigh-Ho patrons demonstrated their partiality to dance teams last week—so Marya and Martyn are held over a second week. And Sunday night the people will foregather in the Heigh-Ho tap room for one of Pete Maciar's Club Onyx style intimate get-togethers with moosicks by the trio. Th eshow runs from 11 to 2. Barnee always has a ringside seat . . . Dick Lam entertained this week with a real Chinese New Year's party for his friends—with shark-fin fixed most deliciously, Wun Tun very okay (no one knows what the ingredients were), fowl, firewater and many other gastronomic attractions. But everyone agreed that Dick's regular fare at the Lotus was very, very good, too . . . Highlighting the Dude Ranch: Mary Latone, tap and acrobatic specialist, pictured on this page, closes the floor show with one of those seven veils dances; Jackie Mazon, a whizz at high-kicking and tapping; Dixie Dyer going to town with "Mood Indigo" . . . Don't miss Lucille Wray at the Maryland Club Gardens—that costume of headdress of peacock feather, wristlets, beads here and there and an engaging smile. Drummer Al Spieldock, in Jimmy Harris's band, says "swing music" is old time jazz polished off, and nothing else but . . . Martin, of the Madrillion, is one headwaiter who can find a table when there isn't any. And Martin may not know anything about music—but he knows when the classics might discourage a dancing crowd that stays on—with patrons waiting to be seated! He also knows fast music will pep up an apathetic crowd.

The Russian Troika floor show this week is made better because of Pauline Achmatova's arrangement of "Katinka," first featured at the Chauve Souris. Achmatova would be the blond soprano of the Gypsy trio. And a very, very good number "Katinka" is, too.

Around the Town at the Supper Shows

Culbertson On Bridge

In mentally reviewing the most brilliant plays encountered in my rather considerable bridge experience, I have had to come to a startling conclusion. It is simply this: that most of them, particularly the beautiful defensive plays, involved the deliberate infraction of one or more so-called rules.

This is a disturbing conclusion. Millions of players follow the rules of play blindly rather than discriminatingly. What can be done to break them of this line-of-least-resistance habit? My earnest advice is to forget the rule and learn the reasons back of it.

Playing in the national tournament of the United States Bridge Association recently I had an opportunity to put the above-mentioned theory into practice. I sat East when the following hand came up. Richard L. Frey was my partner.

West dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

NORTH
♥A 9 4
♣Q 8 3

WEST [Mr. Frey]	EAST [Mr. Culbertson]

♣A K J 9 6 4	♣10 7 2

SOUTH

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1 Club	Double	Pass	1 Heart
2 Clubs	2 Spades	Pass	3 Diamonds
Pass	3 Hearts	Pass	4 Hearts
Pass	Pass	Double	[final bid].

West opened the king of clubs and when I saw the dummy I was positive that Mr. Frey would not have rebid his club suit, when vulnerable, without at least a six card suit, considering all the honor cards in the other suits that he was lacking. Therefore declarer was marked with a singleton club. I played the deuce to the first trick, demanding a shift of lead. West obeyed by leading the spade seven, which dummy's ace won. A low diamond was led from dummy and I won with with the queen. Then, after careful calculation, I led a spade away from my Q-10-8 up to dummy's tenace! I knew I was giving up a trick unnecessarily, but I also knew that that particular trick would do the declarer no good whatsoever! He was marked with five hearts and five diamonds. What would one or two diamond discards on dummy's high spades avail him? And I had another fish to fry, as you will see. North's spade jack won, and the second diamond was led. Again I hopped up with the other honor and led the third round of spades. Declarer was helpless.

Suppose I had not led back the second spade, but had pumped the declarer with a club lead. He would ruff and lead another diamond. I would win and pump him again, but the ruff of a third diamond in the dummy would establish his suit.

By Morgan Baker.

TWO highly significant results developed from the Senate Civil Service Committee's consideration of the bill to restore 30 days annual leave in the Government service, a proposal regarded by Government workers as the most important item on their entire legislative program. They were:

BAKER.

1. A definite statement by the committee that no Government agency opposed the principle of restoration of 30 days leave.

2. Unanimous agreement by the committee that overtime in the Government service is undesirable, and that it should be compensated for in some fashion. The manner of compensation, however, was held to need special study.

Persons outside the Government service are disposed to envy the Government worker's annual leave, for there is a widespread misapprehension that he already has 30 days leave. That is not the case. Back in the days before the merit system was instituted, political appointees enjoyed almost unlimited leave, but under civil service the privilege was definitely restricted to 30 days and later to 15. Against this charges are made for every absence from duty, even for as little time as 15 minutes, so 30 days leave is by no means synonymous with 30 days vacation. Moreover, no per annum employe in the Government service—with possibly a very few exceptions—receives pay for overtime, and in rush periods overtime is both continuous and excessive in many Government agencies.

The principal purpose of the annual leave bill, as described by the American Federation of Government Employes, was to give Government workers opportunity for a real vacation. When the 30 days leave formerly enjoyed was cut to 15, some years ago, Government workers living in distant States did not have time to return home from their duties in Washington. It must be remembered that all departmental jobs in Washington, if under civil service, are apportioned among the States. Personnel officers approve the Federation's view, holding that efficiency is promoted by adequate vacations and a return home once a year; and there is no expense to the Government, since employes take leave only when work permits—at slack seasons—and must do much unpaid overtime work at the busy seasons.

Unpaid overtime is excessive in many agencies, and the American Federation of Government Employes hopes to correct this problem soon. The Senate Committee's attitude indicates that the problem is recognized, and that a solution may be reached soon. The committee favored, however, only 26 days annual leave, or approximately a calendar month, as Sundays are not counted in annual leave.

Retirement Bill Introduced.

Representative Edward J. Hart, of New Jersey, has introduced a bill in Congress that would permit Federal judges to retire at the age of 65, five years earlier than the present law allows. It would also give the President power to appoint a successor to a Federal judge when he reached 75. Supreme Court judges would not be affected.

Edward J. Thomas (P), State Department, and Walter F. Rhine (C), District Surveyor's Office, who, as officers of the engineer's council at George Washington University, are in charge of the annual engineers' ball at the Kennedy Warren tonight.

Father of our Country,
You left to us—in trust—
A rich and priceless Nation;
And it is fair and just
That we protect it well!
For generations, yet unborn.
Should inherit through the ages—
Until earth's final morn.

We have no room within our shores
For those who spurn our flag,
Who seek our Government's downfall,
And of traitorism brag.
The Stars and Stripes are fair enough
To float throughout our land;
And our sacred Constitution
Was hallowed by your hand.

Mrs. Roosevelt Honored By Congressional Club

First Lady Receives With Officers of Club; Members Also Entertain Newspaper Group, Attend Senator Guffey's Sisters' At Home.

By Dudley Harmon.

Five hundred women and one man attended the reception given yesterday by the Congressional Club in honor of Mrs. Roosevelt.

The women were wives of Senators and Representatives and their guests. The lone man was Mr. Joseph Flynn from Iowa, who appeared only slightly embarrassed.

It was a busy day for Congressional Club members. At noon they entertained several newspaperwomen at luncheon, and later many went to the "at home" given by Senator Guffey's three sisters.

Mrs. Roosevelt, dressed in black crepe with touches of white at the throat, and a black hat, received with officers of the club. The Marine Band entertained, but was scarcely heard above the voices of the guests.

Assists at Table.

Assisting at the tea table were Mrs. Joseph Byrnes, Mrs. Edward Taylor, Mrs. Robert Doughton, Mrs. George Norris, Mrs. Bertram Snell, Mrs. Carl Mapes, Mrs. James P. Buchanan, Mrs. Otis Bland, Mrs. Thomas Blanton and Mrs. Clarence Lea.

Cabinet wives were represented by Mrs. Cordell Hull, Mrs. George Dern and Mrs. Henry Wallace. Among others noted were Mrs. Ralph Brewster, Mrs. Dennis Chavez, wife of the Senator from New Mexico; Mrs. Ernest Lundeen, Mrs. Harry Ransley, the only Republican on the club's executive committee; Mrs. Edward Moran, from Maine; Mrs. Roy Miller, visiting here from Corpus Christi; Mrs. Fred Biermann, Mrs. Guy Gillette, Mrs. Randolph Carpenter, Mrs. Lawrence Imhoff, Mrs. Hubert Utterback and Mrs. Clarence Turner.

At the Guffeys Miss Pauletta, in pale blue; Miss Ida, in lavender, and Mrs. Carroll Miller in deep rose received the guests in the drawing room. Senator Guffey was also present.

Minister's Wife Attends.

Mme. de Morgenstierne, wife of the Minister of Norway, chatted in the dining room with Mrs. Louis Qwsley, who was a symphony in black velvet and pearls. Mrs. Thomas Riggs, in sapphire blue velvet, and Mlle. Simone Gaucheron, sister of the First Secretary of the French Embassy, were also present.

TWO ON SAFARI

By GEORGE AGNEW CHAMBERLAIN

Ballard Mallory, young American explorer in Africa, answers a mysterious advertisement in a London paper, and is offered the job of finding a young Englishman lost in the African jungles. Grast, Furman & Menck, solicitors, his employers, demand proof that the missing Englishman is alive or dead.

CHAPTER III.

Plans Take Form.

BALLARD felt he had made a slip in his calculations, possibly because he had not visioned a return; but he was not chagrined, sensing the value in this company of the appearance of having done himself out of a hundred pounds.

"That's so!" he said, managing to make the words sound rueful.

"Don't be sorry, Mr. Mallory," said Mr. Menck, leaning forward as was his habit when he became intent. "I have told you there is nothing sentimental about this expedition. The firm of Grast, Furman & Menck has no interest whatever in the Hon. Laurence Morland, but only in his estate. The truth is very necessary to us at this time. If he is alive we remain, as at present, ex parte; but immediately his death is proved our position becomes active in the extreme."

Throughout the conference Ballard had felt he was being shrewdly observed, but now, for the first time, he sensed he was being watched. Movement had nothing to do with it, for nobody had moved. On the contrary he could trace the subtle urge to be on his guard to an increased stillness, as if the wax of Lord Morland had hardened, as if William Jones' habitual disapproval had frozen, as if the three partners had postponed breathing until some crisis should pass.

It is in such moments that the sovereign game of poker stoops to lay its accolade across the shoulders of the faithful. Ballard's face turned wooden by swift yet imperceptible gradations—doubly imperceptible by reason of an old trick, for all eyes with the possible exception of Lord Morland's were diverted to watching him tap a cigarette on his thumbnail. They waited for him to light it, and waited in vain. They grew anxious, tongue-tied, waiting. In his own time he spoke—to the relief of all.

"I see," he said in a colorless voice. "It's a legal mix-up."

"Exactly!" exploded Mr. Menck, but promptly controlled himself. "You grasp our position, Mr. Mallory. We are ready to accept your services on the terms you have stated; indeed, we find them far more reasonable than we had any ground to expect. You are evidently a man of considerable breeding, temporarily out of funds. As you yourself suggested, we desire that you travel luxuriously. But that is not all; we have felt from the first that whoever carries this enterprise to a successful conclusion is entitled to a generous bonus."

"How much?" asked Ballard, resuming the tapping of the cigarette.

"Ah, there you have me," mourned Mr. Menck. "In the event you discover the young man alive, the matter of reward necessarily will be out of our domain and in his. But should the rumor of his death unfortunately find confirmation—should you succeed in bringing back incontrovertible proof of his demise—our position becomes one of authority. In the case——"

"Yes?" prompted Ballard, his attention inwardly riveted on timing the spaced taps of his cigarette.

"In that case," resumed Mr. Menck, "as administrators of the Morland estate, we can guarantee a bonus of £5,000."

The cigarette kept on tapping at exactly the same pace, but inside Ballard's brain a thousand tiny wheels seemed to start spinning at vertiginous speed. It would be a cinch to do away with a man in Africa—tsetse fly in one region, Anopheles in another. An accidental shot would be too crass, but what about a shot withheld in the face of a charging buffalo? He had thought of three ways already and there must be a dozen more—all of them safe. He was being offered twenty-odd thousand dollars to commit an easy murder.

"A lot of money," he commented and again no perceptible pause had intervened between Mr. Menck's speech and his own. He took a grip on himself; now for the fun! "Would you be willing to put the guarantee in writing?"

"Certainly. Why not?"

With those three words Mr. Menck fired a broadside which shook Mallory's poker education to its very foundations, for he had pictured himself in the heroic role of calling a bluff. He had seen himself walking away with a shrug from a shamefaced circle, perhaps turning in the door to express his disdain and voice a threat of Scotland Yard. Now the tables were turned with a vengeance; it was he who was being called—pay to see or crawl. He raised his eyes. They collided with Mr. Menck's intent gaze and refused to drop. Broadside for broadside: "I accept," said Ballard.

Jones Quivers.

A quiver seemed to pass through William Jones' tortured frame, loosening all his joints, leaving his jaw unhooked. Mr. Grast leaned back with a sigh. Mr. Furman, yielding at last to repeated suggestion, took out a cigarette, tapped it on his thumbnail. Mr. Menck's full lips, while his eyes still remained locked with Ballard's, began to smile. Lord Morland alone gave no sign save the very definite one of rising and stalking toward the door. Not once had his opaque eyes blinked or any expression stirred his features; he was departing as he had come, a wax effigy—with ears. As he passed, Ballard was conscious of a faint, acrid smell, the thin bodiless odor given off by all saprophytic fungi.

"You accept, Mr. Mallory?" stated Mr. Menck as if he were driving home a nail.

"I do," confirmed Ballard in like manner.

"Jones," snapped Mr. Grast, "accompany his lordship."

The old clerk collected his limbs with surprising facility, dodged between the desks and reached the door in time to throw it open for Lord Morland. The two old men, one stamped with immemorial domination, the other wearing the subservient smirk of his class, could be heard traversing the hall and descending the stairs. Even their footfalls carried out the differentiation—one thudding, the other catfooting in respectful attendance.

A few minutes later Ballard, armed with an amazing document, was on his way out. Nobody attended him; he opened and closed the door for himself. He was glad to be alone, for in spite of his outward assurance he was excusably bewildered. What had he let himself in for? Was he really going man-hunting in Africa, or would he snatch at the first transatlantic liner, crawl home and pull the covers over his head? He had abandoned all his half-formed hope of a chance to study the roan antelope or the lesser kudu as thoroughly as he had the inyala, but in their place a new aspiration, vague as a cloud on the horizon, was beginning to take form.

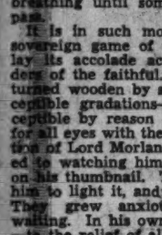
2 New Creams Protect Nails And Cuticles

Stains Removed, Cracking and Hangnails Prevented by Their Use.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

A SERIOUS NAIL condition exists among women today. Because of the constant use of liquid polishes, and the exposure of the hands to strong soaps and hard water, the natural oils are dissipated. The nails become brittle, the cuticle dried and cracked. Since no hands can be truly beautiful and expressive unless the nails are well cared for, it becomes a matter of the moment to minister to the fingertips.



We are especially fortunate in this day and time to have scientific remedies for these dry nail conditions. One of the newest of these remedies does things in an almost magic way. The treatment consists of two small jars of creams which sell together in a set for only 50 cents. The first, a massage cream, corrects and removes ridges and corrugations, and prevents the nails from cracking or breaking.

It removes nicotine and other stains almost instantly, and restores the natural pink color attendant on healthy nails. It gives a lasting luster. And—it's marvelous as a base for liquid polish as it protects the nails against the harsh drying action of the polish.

Toothbrushes in Box.

ONE OF THE BEST buys we've seen in many a day has to do with—you'll be surprised—toothbrushes! Six brushes with fine stiff bristles and sleek bamboo handles come to you, wrapped in cellophane, in a neat little cardboard box.

If there are several in your family, each person can write his name on the handle of the brush. If you have guests, and they stay unexpectedly overnight, or if they come and forget their toothbrush, it's fine to have one of these to offer.

Gay Blouses Allure.

AS ALLURING as a bed of bright spring blossoms are the crisp looking, gayly colored blouses shown in a downtown store. Since it's a suit season — and there's no denying that — it's bound to be a blouse season, too. And here are scads of them, blue, pink, tan, red, yellow, green, in pique, linen, broadcloth and voile.

The styles are tempting. Some have low V necks, some have ruffles down the front, some are mannish and smack of Bond street, and others are sweet and school girlish.

Mild Soap for Hands.

SKINS THAT are neither too oily nor too dry need no remedy. They do, however, need care and the bland protection offered by one of the finest, mildest soaps on the market. It's a soap made of pure, unadulterated olive oil. You may depend on it to do a gentle but thorough job of cleansing. Not only does it whisk away the surface soil, but penetrates and purges the pores.

Clubwomen Join Protest Against Erskine Book

MRS. HENRY GRATTAN DOYLE.

JOHN ERSKINE, who, in his recent book, "The Influence of Women—And Its Cure"—advocates sending members of women's organizations back to the dishpan, has found himself the target of feminists and club leaders.

MRS. RAYMOND GRAM SWING.

MRS. HARRIS T. BALDWIN.

MRS. HARVEY W. WILEY.

Home Life Proper Vocation for Females, Columbia Professor Holds.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

WHEN John Erskine fired a fusillad of criticism at feminism in his recent book, "The Influence of Women—And Its Cure," he stirred up a hornet's nest.

Rallying around Dr. Mary Ritter Beard, feminist leader and author, who has already soundly scolded the Columbia University professor in print, representative Washington women yesterday added their voices to her protest over the book.

A scathing indictment of leisure-class women who organize for "movements" and "causes," the volume denounces women who go out the front parlor into public life.

If Mr. Erskine had his way, women would have this choice. Either go back to the home and its dishpans, dustcloths and diapers, or—if they have to work, they go about it quietly and singly, without any fanfare of the feminine organization. In his opinion, the American woman made her big mistake when she started striving for mass influence by "joining the Daughters of This and the Society for That." By sticking her finger into every pie of public endeavor, she has created chaos, until today, "except for the one matter of child-bearing, society can now get along without the typical American woman," Mr. Erskine asserts.

Controversial Statements.

Other controversial statements from his book follow:

"The influence which women exercise in mass is funny when not distressing, distressing when not pernicious. To realize her true talent for inspiration, woman should be isolated."

"The entrance of women into public life, into politics or education or the professions or business, has not made life sweeter or stronger or more civilized or more secure."

"No education has yet been invented for women; they have merely imitated men's . . . Starting with the fact that our educational system, to which girls are now admitted, was intended only for boys, let us observe what women are doing to it . . . With the best intentions they are busy making girls out of boys."

"Men can teach boys the science of political life, but women apparently can not, perhaps because their view of politics will always be exclusively moral or economic."

A Better Showing.

"The ablest women in public life have probably accomplished at least as much as the moderately able men—and perhaps we shouldn't expect a better showing."

"When women talk of preserving the Constitution, you can't be sure what they mean. Since they are not given to quoting the document, you may even doubt whether they've read it."

"Why shouldn't society insist that every married woman stick to her maiden name, whether she marries or not? . . . Many women borrow false plumage from their husband's names."

"The meanest thing men could do to the women of America would be to give them what they pretend to want—complete equality . . . I don't say this woman's world should be converted into a man's world, but at least it should be a man-and-woman's world, and I'd put the man first in the title."

"For better or worse, the romantic etiquette is now somewhat worn out, but somehow women are still objects of pursuit, which they pretend not to like, and they are still objects of worship, at least theoretically, and they approve of the theory."

Vehement Reactions.

When such statements as these were read to Washington women yesterday, reactions were both volatile and vehement. Some had already seen the book and found it "too dull to read;" another was "not surprised at anything that fellow Erskine would write;" while still another was convinced "he wrote only with an eye to sales."

Mrs. Raymond Gram Swing, of the executive council of the National Woman's Party, had this to say: "Mr. Erskine clings pathetically to his chivalry, which really hides his sense of superiority to women. Of course he is opposed to giving women equality with men. He could never function successfully in a man-and-woman world!"

Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, former president of the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs and vice chairman of the National Woman's Party, believes "whatever we say in defending ourselves will make the author chortle and howl. He wants us to rise up in wrath, so his book sales will mount accordingly.

"His declaration regarding women using their husband's name is a choice argument for the Lucy Stone League, one of the strongest feminist groups on record. Let me remind him, however, great men generally have great women at their sides. Often wives deserve to carry the husband's name as much as the husband himself."

"Everything women have accomplished has been through organization. Since he strikes boldly at massed women, Mr. Erskine patently prefers them singly and defenseless. I suppose what he most abjects to is not their organizations, but the power they have gained through them."

Through Organization.

Mrs. Harris T. Baldwin, vice president of the National League of Women Voters, was particularly interested in the passages on women in politics. "He seems to have skimmed over the facts," she said. "Constantly comparing the ablest women in politics to only moderately able men, proves he hasn't weighed his points carefully enough. As for his ideas on what women know, or don't know, about the Constitution—well, I believe Mr. Erskine has been a bit hasty there. My observation leads me to believe women interested in government today are most studious and thorough in their approach to subjects concerning it."

Mrs. Lloyd Biddle, president of the D. C. Federation of Women's Clubs, was alternately amused and irritated when she heard some choice passages from the book.

"Plainly Mr. Erskine wants us to talk back," she chuckled. "This is good advertisement for the book, but it's hardly fair to us. From what I gather, he is totally unaware of contributions organized women have made to human welfare. If he opened his eyes and looked about a bit, I believe he would soften his statements considerably."

Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the D. C. Board of Education, believes Mr. Erskine's comments on modern school systems "are right, in part."

"While I am strong for women teachers," she said, "I do agree we need more men in our schools. I have often deplored the fact so many men teachers strive for executive positions.

"But I don't agree with the author that women teachers are 'making girls out of boys,' or that they are ruining our schools in any respect."

Dr. Mary Ritter Beard is still firing verbal blasts in Mr. Erskine's direction. "The book deserves nothing so much as to die unnoticed," she said yesterday. "He wrote it principally because he wanted to be on a best-seller list once more. The subject offered him a chance for a splendid caricature, but he muffed it. Giving vent to his blind rage and resentment against women, he has turned out an infinitely stupid piece of writing."

Additional features of interest to women will be found today on page 18.

Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

WHEN THE CHILDREN are too big to be kept safely in a crib or play pen, but not big enough to understand how many things there are around a house to demolish themselves with, a lady has only one way of escaping premature gray hairs. That is to go through the house systematically, room by room, and make each one childproof. Fasten all lamp cords with staples to the baseboards and place the tables so the part that can's be tacked down is out of reach. Push all accessories, vases, bibelots far back on chests and high tables—out of reach. Make hook-and-eye fasteners for your dressing table skirt or the cosmetics in its drawers will give some body little a grand good time.

Keep drawers locked that a toddler can open. Tie all scissors on the place in a safe spot and fine older members of the family who don't put them back there. Banish waste baskets for the time being . . . use covered jars and covered baskets that look presentable enough on the tops of dressers, pianos and desks to hold scraps and waste paper; as for low book shelves, we've never solved that problem ourself . . . the best idea we've had is wire netting, but we haven't quite made up our minds to carry out the threat. (So far the children of our family help themselves to the volumes they want.) Then the last gesture is some high shelves for everything else that you can't dispose of anywhere else.

If you want ideas for decorating a child's room, send a stamp for Miss Boykin's bulletin, "How to Decorate Walls for a Child's Room."

Red Cells of Blood Live Short Time; Weakness Symptoms Cited

Millions of New Cells Born in Bone Marrow Every Hour; Undue Fatigue and Hemorrhages Cited as Danger Marks.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

THE red cells of the blood live relatively short lives—15 to 30 days. They are constantly undergoing deterioration and, when they become old, they die. This means that they must be replaced and millions of new cells are born in the bone marrow every hour (approximately one trillion in each 24 hours). We can understand, therefore, that if anything goes wrong in the bone marrow, or if substances needed for its stimulation are lacking, the supply of new red cells may not equal the demand. The blood-forming organs of the body may drop in efficiency exactly as the kidneys or the heart may fail.

The most common manifestation is weakness. The onset is gradual and the patient will usually relate that for weeks or months he has noticed signs of undue fatigue at the end of the day, although rest restored the ability to work. The tendency to fatigue becomes greater with the passing of time until finally the slightest muscular exertion proves prostrating. Shortness of the breath and palpitation of the heart follow effort. Whenever the number of red cells drops to 1,000,000 per cubic millimeter (normally 5,000,000) the tendency to hemorrhage shows itself in the appearance of tiny red spots on the skin and in bleeding from the nose or the gums.

Along with symptoms of weakness attacks of sore tongue are definitely diagnostic. The symptom is present in about 65 per cent of all cases. It may be just a mild rawness of the tongue or the patient will complain that salty, hot, or acid foods cause distress. Occasionally the tongue symptoms disappear only to return. The appetite is poor although as a rule it appears in ravenous form during periods of improvement. While many patients complain of abdominal distress there are no localized areas of tenderness. The feeling is one of heaviness or discomfort.

The diagnosis is not difficult as the patient appears weak and pale and there is usually a slight yellowish tint to the skin. Hydrochloric acid is absent from the stomach, and if there is a history of repeated attacks of sore tongue, little remains to confirm the diagnosis other than to make a careful examination of the blood.

Youth of 22 Expresses Himself on "General Subject of Fellows, Girls, Morals, Etc.;" Man Past 50 Offers "Fatherly Advice" to "Seventeen."

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I read with a great deal of interest your column concerning "Seventeen" and the answers from "Twenty One" and "J. C." I am 22. May I take this opportunity of expressing myself on the general subject of fellows, girls, morals, etc.

I have been out with probably every type of girl there is in the course of over six years and I have met several attractive girls who have "charm, appeal, intelligence, culture and purity of mind and body," to quote the words of "Twenty One," who says he has yet to meet a girl with such attributes. I have met girls who are "considerate of others, generous and capable of affection," to further quote his words, and I feel genuinely sorry for the fellow who has not been able to meet such a girl. Raise your standards a little, Twenty One.

• • • •

Maybe I am lucky in that I have always been able to choose with great care the girls I wanted to go with, but there have been a goodly number who would make any fellow proud to be able to say he knows any one of them.

• • • •

On the question of girls drinking and smoking, most of the girls smoke these days and there are comparatively few who won't take a drink, but I say that generally speaking the average girl is no worse off for it, and in my opinion the girls who don't have too many ideas about "morals," so-called, are in every way as decent as those others who are very definitely wet blankets. Most fellows will know the type I am referring to.

• • • •

Naturally I like a girl who is a good sport and who is at ease regardless of the time and place. No person wants to take a girl any place he will need to apologize for, but he does like to take a girl places where it doesn't cost too much. Still, some girls would think they were out of place in such surroundings, and would feel it wasn't good enough for them.

• • • •

I frankly admit from what I know of fellows that there are an awful lot who are out for what they can get from girls, but there are still a lot of us who are just as decent as the best of girls. I might say that "J. C." either hasn't been around very much or else he should be a little more particular about the girls he goes with. He has only himself to blame if the girls he goes around with seem to expect to be made the object of promiscuous advances. There are extremes in everything, but I want to say for "J. C.'s" information that there are a lot of girls left who can drink and smoke and still "retain all the things considered best." I take six years' experience on this letter. Sincerely.

D. P.

Essential Decency of Modern Youth Affirmed.

DEAR D. P.: As one grown a trifle worn and weary the past week conducting what seemed to be a lone-handed defense of modern youth against its own charges of moral laxity, I must say I am deeply grateful to you for rallying to the support of my belief in the essential decency of our boys and girls. The findings of your six years' experience must make very pleasant reading for those who stoutly refuse to believe that youth of today is selling its birthright for a mess of pottage. Your letter should be a constructive object lesson to "Seventeen," "Twenty One," "J. C." and any other unhappy youngsters who may be suffering from the erroneous conclusion that decency is the exception rather than the rule among their contemporaries. M. H.

"Girls of 15 to 17, Please Take Notice!"

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: If you will be so kind as to permit an old man to butt in on your column, I shall much appreciate your passing on to "Seventeen" a bit of fatherly advice. In view of the fact that her experiences with men have been so invariably disagreeable, I am led to believe her trouble lies in her own conduct and is not due to any unusual amount of personal magnetism. Naturally, a young man is not going to tell her what causes him to make bold advances; probably he could not define his reactions if he would.

• • • •

I am willing to wager a dime against a brass button that if she will dress modestly; keep her speech clean; refrain from listening to or telling risque stories; sit up on her side of the seat when riding with a young man in a car; refuse to be "petted" if and when he parks for that purpose and suggest instead that they proceed along home; and, last, but not least, reserve her kisses for the few and restrict those given to a few seconds' duration, her disagreeable experiences will end at once.

• • • •

I refuse to believe young men of today have become so depraved that they go around offering insults to every girl they keep company with for a month or so. I have more confidence in them than that. The best of them, however, will accept free gifts which may be had for the asking. That is human nature. Girls of 15 to 17, please take notice! Sincerely yours,

PAST FIFTY.

Invest the Erring With Feeling of Self-Respect.

DEAR PAST FIFTY: I am herewith passing on your advice to "Seventeen" for what it may be worth. I can't agree with you, however, that the young lady's conduct is wholly to blame for her experiences. And even if I did think so, I would still prefer to counsel her in such a way as to invest her with a feeling of self-respect rather than with a conviction of personal guilt. In weaning the individual away from socially unacceptable behavior, it is more productive of good to dwell on his finer potentialities than to emphasize his past mistakes. M. H.

Parent Cannot Teach a Child Wise Spending

He Will, of Course, Make Mistakes, but in Time Will Learn How.

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

"HOW CAN I teach my child to spend wisely?"

No person can teach a child this. The child himself must learn by experience. He must be given money and permitted to use it without restrictions on what he does with it.

At first he may spend his whole allowance as soon as he gets it. Let him. Later in the week when the family goes to the movies and leaves him at home because he has no money for a ticket, he will begin to appreciate the wisdom of careful budgeting. In any event, the loss is his, and he has a perfect right to spend his money as he likes if he is willing to take the consequences.

The difficulty which most parents have is in bearing the pain of his disappointment. They are very apt to be unwilling to let the child face the results of his own short-sightedness.

For the good of the children, parents must learn to endure such pain and disappointment. It is probably much worse for them than for the children. But unless they let the child make his own decisions and abide by the results, whether pleasant or unpleasant, the child never will learn the lesson of using money intelligently.

Meatless Meals Can Be Varied In Many Ways

Mushrooms and Eggplant Offer Chances for Experiment.

By Elisabeth Ellicott Poe.

WITH ASH WEDNESDAY but a few days off, the thoughts of home makers turn to the meatless meals which are a part of that season.

Following are two dishes that will substitute for meat on the menu:

Baked Mushrooms.

Wash, drain and dry one-half pound large, fresh mushrooms carefully. Remove stems and scrape. Place cap side up in a small, shallow pan. Sprinkle lightly with salt and pepper, drop bits of butter over it, pour one-half cup cream over whole. Bake 12 or 15 minutes in hot oven, shaking pan occasionally. Serve on slices of crisp toast, and pour over any cream remaining in pan.

Cream Stuffed Eggplant.

1 medium eggplant
4 tablespoons rolled cornflakes or grape nuts
1 teaspoon chopped parsley
1 cup thick white sauce, parsley and salt, pepper and paprika

Wash eggplant, soak in salted water 1 hour to crisp. Cut in half lengthwise, scoop out pulp, being careful not to break shell.

Cover pulp with boiling water, add a little salt, cook until tender. Drain from water, cut in very small pieces, add to white sauce. Season well with salt, pepper, paprika and parsley. Fill shells with mixture. Sprinkle rolled cornflakes or grapenuts on top, dot with bits of butter. Bake in hot oven 10 to 15 minutes, browning nicely.

Baked rice with cheese is another tasty meatless main dish. The ingredients are 2 cups cold boiled rice, 1¼ cups milk, one-third pound yellow cheese, 2 tablespoonsful of butter, 2 tablespoons flour, 2 tablespoons bread crumbs, salt, pepper and paprika.

Melt butter in saucepan (do not brown). Stir in flour until bubbly, stir in milk gradually until sauce is smooth and thickened. Add cheese cut in very thin strips, stir until melted. Season with salt, pepper and paprika to taste. Mix in rice. Put in greased baking dish, sprinkle with crumbs and bits of butter. Bake in moderate oven, about 20 minutes.

Health Group To Ask Draft Of Estimates

Directors of Federation of Churches Back Campaign

The District Commissioners will be requested formally to prepare and submit additional estimates for public health activities just as soon as they grant an audience to the civic committee formed at last Sunday's mass meeting.

This was decided last night when the committee, headed by Dr. Sterling Ruffin, met and authorized the chairman to arrange an interview with the Commissioners. A subcommittee was appointed to draft a statement which will be presented, along with resolutions adopted Sunday, to the District heads.

"Positive Necessity."

The Rev. Dr. W. L. Darby reported to the committee that directors of the Washington Federation of Churches, of which he is executive secretary, yesterday indorsed the campaign of the District Medical Society for adequate public health appropriations. The resolution adopted by the board stated that a survey of health needs has shown the positive necessity of increased appropriations, and that the Medical Society has assumed the logical leadership in presenting evidence of these needs to Congress and in urging their prompt consideration, and whereas, all the congregations in the Washington Federation of Churches are vitally affected by the lack of adequate public health protection in the District, resolved that this board of directors of the Washington Federation of Churches ratifies and indorses the resolutions adopted at the citizens' meeting on February 16, 1936; and that copies of this action be sent to all our constituent member churches with a recommendation for their prompt and wholehearted support of this united effort to better living conditions in Washington, including such action as they may deem it wise to take for the improvement of this serious situation.

Resolutions adopted at the mass meeting Sunday petitioned the District Commissioners to declare that the present public health situation, as a result of budget curtailments, constitutes a grave emergency.

Dr. Ruffin, president of the District Medical Society and chairman of the civic committee, said last night following the meeting that this position will be "amplified" by the supplementary statement to be drafted by a sub-committee headed by Dr. Prentiss Willson.

O'Grady a Member.

Other members are the Right Rev. John O'Grady, director of Catholic charities for the District; Mrs. Ernest R. Grant, executive secretary, Tuberculosis Association of the District, and Dr. Arthur C. Christie, chairman of the public health committee, Washington Board of Trade.

Dr. Ruffin declared he will attempt to arrange a meeting between the District heads and the entire civic committee as soon as possible.

Oxygen Revives Four Felled by Gas in Store

Mysterious Flow of Fumes in Southwest Building Makes Two Others Ill; Rescue Squad Rescusitates 3 Women and Man.

A mysterious flow of gas overcame four persons and made two other persons ill in Southwest Washington yesterday.

Mrs. Mabel Tippett, 33, visited the grocery store of Mrs. Ida Deckelbaum, 1326 Fourth street southwest, but found it empty.

Walking into a back room she saw a man and two women lying there unconscious.

They were James H. Deperini, 30, a painter, who had been working in the building; Mrs. Sylvia Lohman, 22, of Baltimore, stepdaughter of Mrs. Deckelbaum, and Miss Esther Kolker, 22, who lives in the building.

Mrs. Tippett, who lives at 1330 Fourth street southwest, notified police and shortly thereafter collapsed from the effects of the gas and fright.

Two colored laundresses, working in another part of the building, were made ill by the gas. They are Victoria Cooper, 35, of 224 Fourth street southwest, and Estelle Ball, 35, of 447 New Jersey avenue southeast.

The Fire Rescue Squad and police reserves hurried to the house in response to Mrs. Tippett's call. Oxygen was used to revive the three women and the man.

Sergt. P. B. Grisso, of the Rescue Squad, reported that the gas was of the carbon monoxide variety, but he was not able to point to the source.

Officials of the Washington Gas Light Co. were unable to find any leaks in the house or in the vicinity. They said they would continue their investigation.

None of those affected by the gas was in a serious condition. All refused hospital treatment.

2 New Army Guns At Ft. Myer Today

Two of the Army's new 75-millimeter field guns will be placed on exhibition this afternoon from 2 to 4 o'clock at Fort Myer.

The firing range of the new guns is 13,500 yards, roughly 5,000 yards more than the old 75's, and equal to the range of the standard 155 millimeter guns. Where the 155's weigh more than 7,500 pounds, the new 75's weight only 2,600 pounds and can be drawn by horse or tractor.

The new guns cost approximately $5,000 more than the old 75's. The two guns were brought to the Capital three weeks ago to be shown to the military affairs committees of Congress.

3 Boy Runaways Held in Richmond

The three 13-year-old boys, who left Washington early this week, thinking to ride their bicycles to sunny Florida, got no further than Richmond, Va., according to word received here last night from the Richmond police.

The boys are Stewart Poland, Paul Dayton and Randolph Hamilton, all students at the Powell Junior High School. They had only $2 among them, but they were determined to get away from Washington's succession of blizzards.

Jobless Insurance Fund Now $60,000

With two bulging sacks of mail still unopened, John Marshall, director of unemployment insurance, yesterday reported that returns by employers so far opened and counted had totaled $60,000.

First returns were due from employers not later than February 15. These now are being checked over. Because the unemployment compensation commission has yet no staff, the work is being done by the employes of the office of superintendent of insurance.

What the mail remaining to be opened will show in the way of returns, Marshall refused to forecast. The $60,000 counted so far would represent a monthly payroll for January of $6,000,000. One per cent of payrolls now is being levied on employers to provide funds for future payment of unemployed moneys.

Dog Returned

Owner Sends Thanks to District Heads.

Harry Burns, 3313 Seventh street northwest, has recovered his dog. He told the District Commissioners so in a letter yesterday.

Several days ago Burns wrote the Commissioners complaining his dog, a wire-haired terrier, had been permitted to escape his yard because trash collectors persisted in leaving open his back gate. He called on the Commissioners to have the refuse department find the dog.

A woman, whose name was not given by Burns, found the dog some distance away, and, having read of the complaint, returned the animal. Burns thanked the Commissioners, the police and the refuse department for their interest.

City to Honor Washington At Exercises

Programs in Schools Today; Business to Suspend

It will be all Washington this week-end, with Washingtonians and the City of Washington commemorating the 204th anniversary of the birth of the Father of His Country.

Celebrations which will begin today with "cherry tree" plays in local schools and extend through Sunday with church and memorial services, will reach their gala peak tomorrow with patriotic exercises, birthday balls and "revivals" of the old days.

Banks, libraries and many businesses will close this afternoon not to reopen until Monday, while all department stores and many specialty shops will close at 1 p. m. tomorrow. For the first time in the memory of many a veteran mail carrier the postoffice will maintain one morning delivery.

Postmaster William Mooney explained the delivery was made necessary by requests of numerous concerns that planned to stay open part of tomorrow and because this year Washinton's birthday falls on Saturday.

Representative Fish to Speak.

Chief among the celebrations planned for tomorrow are exercises to be held in Memorial Continental Hall at 10:45 a. m. under auspices of the district societies of the Sons of the American Revolution, Daughters of the American Revolution, and the Children of the American Revolution.

Representative Hamilton Fish, jr., of New York, will deliver the principal address. Greetings will be extended by Maj. Charles C. Griggs, Henry F. Baker, Dr. Thomas E. Green, Helen Harman and Mrs. Charles A. S. Sinclair, all officers of the patriotic societies.

Music will be furnished by the United States Marine Band with Wildred Smith, local tenor, as soloist.

Typical of the numerous patriotic skits and tableaux to be presented today in local schools were those to be staged at the Nelson School. "George Washington and the Cherry Tree" will be enacted by Luis Quintanilla, George Marshall, Julian Huffman and John Clark; "The Making of the First Flag," by Martin Snyder, Douglas McElzeen, George Smith, Joseph Meyers, Stephen McClaren, Michael Davis and Albert Peters; and "Self-Sacrifice Soldier Saved," by Val Halloran, Buddy Bull, George Benson, Homer Bone and Robert Frazier.

Mrs. Marion Wade Doyle, president of the Board of Education; Judge Robert E. Mattingly and Department Commander Joseph J. Malloy will speak at the assembly program in the Paul Junior High School, under auspices of the Fort Stevens Squadron of the Sons of the American Legion.

Prizes to Be Awarded.

Medals to prize winners in the George Washington essay contest sponsored by the post will be awarded and entertainment provided.

"The Father of the Country" will be the subject of an address by Grace R. Johnson, history instructor at Central High School, at a meeting tonight of the Takoma Park Citizens Association. Edward J. Kelly, assistant to the superintendent of the National Capital Parks, will show a film of "A Future Park System for Washington and its Environs."

Special assembly programs have been arranged at all of the community centers for tonight by Mrs. Elizabeth K. Peeples, director of the community center department of the Board of Education.

Tomorrow night the Russell Mitchell Post of the American Legion will hold a birthday ball in the Lee Room of the George Mason Hotel in Alexandria. The proceeds will go toward erection of the $5,000,000 memorial to the memory of District veterans of all wars.

Birthday Dinner.

At Wakefield, Va., women of the Northern Neck chapter of the Wakefield National Memorial Association, dressed in eighteenth century garb, will hold "open house."

On Sunday the National League of Masonic Clubs will hold religious services at the Second Baptist Church, Seventeenth and East Capitol streets.

W. R. T. Held Worth Half Sum Claimed

Witness Says $300,246, Is Proper Figure; Not $623,665.

Value of the Washington Rapid Transit Co. is less than half the amount estimated by company witnesses, Byers McK. Bachman, chief accountant of the Public Utilities Commission, testified yesterday at hearings on the proposal of the Capital Transit Co. to buy the bus company for $539,823.

Books of the company showed that, when depreciation and some other items had been deducted, it was worth only $300,246, Bachman told the commission. Edward Roberts, of New York, presented by the Capital Transit, had placed the value at $623,665.

Fred A. Sager, chief engineer of the commission, cut the Roberts estimate almost in half. He testified that careful examination of the company had placed its maximum value at $325,336.

Henry J. Saunders, valuation expert employed by the commission, is to take the witness stand when hearings are resumed today.

Doleful History.

A doleful financial history of the company was unfolded in exhibits filed by Bachman. During the past ten years the company had encountered a net operating lose of $352,258, he said.

Every year the company has ended in the red, with the exception of the last two years, 1934 and 1935, and it would have done so in those years had it carried forward accruals for depreciation at a uniform rate, Bachman said. In 1934 the company books showed a net margin of $7,121, and last year the profit shown on the books was $42,744, he said.

J. E. Heberle, vice president of the Capital Transit, sought to show the improving condition of the company, and asked if recent losses would not have been smaller than in preceding years, even it uniform depreciation had been carried forward. Bachman said that was so.

In addition to depreciation, Bachman said he had deducted from his valuation $25,000 worth of stock paid to unnamed persons, for raising $100,000 cash for the company's use, and $60,000 worth of stock paid W. E. Reed for his "franchise."

Defends Deduction.

William A. Roberts, people's counsel, defended that deduction, insisting the company did not own a franchise in the accepted sense of the term. George T. Dunlop, company counsel, declared that the company had some sort of a franchise value.

Roberts, the company witness, underwent a determined cross-examination earlier in the day.

The witness admitted he had added 20 per cent to the reproduction, or new cost, of the physical properties, as "going-concern value, and other overhead expense." He insisted this was not too much.

Hearings are expected to be concluded today.

Victim of Fire Dies in Hospital

Frank Lee, colored, 33, died in Providence Hospital yesterday after he was burned and overcome by smoke in a fire in his home, 114 Virginia avenue southwest.

Private Ernest Renfro, attached to No. 10 Truck Company, received treatment at Emergency Hospital for a cut over his eye. He was struck by a falling timber.

Lee was found unconscious in bed on the second floor of the house by Capt. J. B. Keyes, and died shortly after arriving at the hospital. Three other occupants were forced into the street in night clothes.

PWA Assigns $31,000 To Howard University

Permission to use $31,000, previously set aside for building and construction purposes, for specified work, was granted yesterday to Howard University by Public Works Administrator Harold L. Ickes.

The sum of $15,000 will be used for alterations and improvements to the college of dentistry and pharmacy building. The balance is to be used for construction of two reinforced concrete transformer vaults, primary wiring and other necessary equipment.

D. C. Bar Urges Judge Schuldt Be Kept in Post

Reappointment of Judge Gus A. Schuldt to the Police Court bench was urged last night by the District Bar Association.

The organization also voted to inform Attorney General Cummings "if for any reason" Judge Schuldt's retention should "not be practicable," the selection should be made from a supplemental list it indorsed.

Included in the association's list of available local lawyers were George E. McNeil, assistant United States attorney; Frederick A. Thuee; Edward M. Curran, assistant corporation counsel; David A. Hart, assistant United States attorney, and James W. Lauderdale, assistant corporation counsel.

George C. Gertman, secretary, explained to the members the list was compiled by the board of directors on the basis of replies to a referendum conducted by mail.

While official standings of those named were not made public, Judge Schuldt was reported to have been indorsed for reappointment by two-thirds of the lawyers who voted.

The name of Mr. Lauderdale, not included by the directors, was added at the request of Leo A. Rover, former United States attorney. He praised Lauderdale as "exceptionally capable."

Every effort will be made by the bar association to have a Washington man chosen, should Judge Schuldt not be reappointed.

D. C. Detectives Oppose Bill for New System

Headquarters and precinct detectives last night voted to oppose a bill pending before Congres which would create first and second class detectives.

Members indicated they preferred to continue working under the present system of headquarters and precinct men.

The bill was tentatively approved yesterday by a sub-committee of the House District Committee. It probably will be reconsidered, due to the action of the detectives.

Roosevelt Sends Burke Nomination to Senate

The nomination of Vincent C. Burke, deputy First Assistant Postmaster General, to be postmaster of the District was sent to the Senate yesterday by President Roosevelt.

No serious opposition is expected, but the appointment will follow the usual course of being considered by the Senate Committee on Postoffices and Post Roads.

Order's Ideals Furnish Leadership, Dr. Sizoo Tells Grand Masters.

World powers should be guided by "Masonic truths and principles," Dr. Joseph R. Sizoo, New York Avenue Presbyterian Church pastor, told a dinner of grand masters of Masonic lodges from every State last night at the Willard Hotel.

He said he was surprised to discover on a recent trip abroad the peasants of Germany, Italy and Russia were far more interested in Hitler, Mussolini and Stalin than in the form of governments existing in their countries.

"The world would be better," he said, "if people would cease thinking so much about individual heroes and seek to have governments observe the fundamental truths and principles taught by Masonry through the ages."

Movies were shown of activities of Masonic charitable institutions at Utica and Round Lake, N. Y.

Earlier in the day many of the visitors were received at the White House by President Roosevelt, himself a Mason.

The grand masters will meet again today in the Willard. Grand secretaries of Masonic lodges will meet at the same time in the Raleigh Hotel, as well the Masonic Service Association of the United States.

Fuel Oil Price Boosted Here By Cold Wave

Light Snow Is Forecast; No Danger of Flood for 2 More Days.

Transportation Difficulties Cause Shortage in Coal Supplies.

A rise in fuel oil prices because of transportation difficulties and a shortage of some grades of coal were reported yesterday despite the break in the Northwest cold wave that has gripped the city all week.

Light snow was forecast as a possibility for today by the Weather Bureau, with relief in a rising temperature promised for later in the day. Although this afternoon is expected to be slightly warmer than yesterday, there is no danger that the snow-heaped and ice-bound Potomac will break up into a flood for another two days, it was said.

Refiners Ask Price Rise.

The quarter-cent-gallon rise in the price of fuel oil was ordered by refiners and passed on to consumers not because of a threatened shortage—leading fuel companies reported surplus supplies—but because of increased costs in shipping the oil from gulf refineries because of the snow. It was the second such rise of a quarter of a cent caused by snow since January 1.

The shortage of coal was not considered serious, being restricted to a few varieties, for which there is only a moderate demand.

The temperature climbed slowly yesterday from a low of 14 degrees at 7 in the morning to 28 degrees at 5 p. m., when it began falling with the approach of clouds heralding fresh snows.

The streets in the main were dry, although one automobile accident was reported and a colored woman, Vivian Kincade, 40, of 1418 Q street northwest, fractured her right leg in a fall on the ice at Fourteenth and P streets. She was taken to Freedmen's Hospital.

Hurt in Taxicab.

Marjorie Earion, 30, of 435 G street northwest, was removed to the Emergency Hospital with a lacerated face and hands when the taxicab in which she was riding collided with a street car rounding the corner at Ninth and G streets.

In the Plains States a fresh cold wave sweeping down from the Mackenzie Valley threatened to end the comparatively temperate interlude prevailing yesterday. Many Midwestern cities reported the highest temperature readings in weeks, but in the Northwest a bitter cold wind of 34 degrees below howled over the Montana plains as it headed southeast.

Concern over ice perils mounted. St. Joseph, Mich., officials prepared to dynamite a St. Joseph River gorge, described as the worst on record, and which threatened to smash five bridges connecting Benton Harbor with St. Joseph.

Nelson Eddy, Costar of "Rose Marie," Talks With Drama Desk Over Long Distance

Reveals Plans That Preclude A Local Visit

By Nelson B. Bell.

Nelson Eddy, co-starred with Jeanette MacDonald in "Rose Marie," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's picturization of the Friml operetta of the same name, being held over for a second week at Loew's Palace Theater, had twice as much fun making the current subject as he had in making "Naughty Marietta," the earlier release of the same company's for the same distinguished singing stars, because it took twice as long!

Although as close to the National Capital as the Virginia tidewater, he will not visit Washington until his concert engagement in April, under the auspices of the Dorothy Hodgson Dorsey concert bureau.

He hopes "Naughty Marietta" and "Rose Marie" will be the worst pictures he will ever make!

Considered one of the most eligible bachelors in the film colony, he has no present thought of matrimony.

No Grand Opera.

There will be no grand opera performances between the present time and the making of his next picture—only concert tours, such as the one on which he is now engaged.

After his appearance in concert in Newport News, Roanoke and Lynchburg, Va., the tour veers back into the Middle West, with one brief deflection for purposes of a radio broadcast which will allow a margin of about 15 minutes before and after for the matter of alighting from and boarding trains, or planes, as the exigency of the moment may suggest.

That is why even a brief side trip to Washington is out of the question.

This all came out during a long-distance phone interview with Mr. Eddy yesterday afternoon.

With four-fifths of the drama desks eager to bombard him with questions, Mr. Eddy displayed a remarkable degree of patience, graciousness and good-fellowship from his end of the line in Norfolk, Va. We of the so-called critical fraternity were in the office of Division Manager Carter Tate Barron, in Loew's Fox Theater, although Mr. Barron himself was in Baltimore.

The interview was rigged up and sprung upon the unsuspecting Mr. Eddy by Raymond Bell, local director of Loew publicity, and that indefatigable publicist, Mr. Norman Pyle, of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, who happens to be accompanying Mr. Eddy on his concert engagements in nearby Virginia cities.

Was Here Last Year.

It was recalled with pleasure by both this column and Mr. Eddy that we had met on the occasion of Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrand's preview presentation of "Naughty Marietta" in the Fox Theater last year, when Woody S. Van Dyke, the director of both the Victor Herbert operetta and "Rose Marie," and Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson also were present.

It was evident that Mr. Eddy entertains feelings of high regard for the National Capital and its theater-going public. He was, of course, highly elated that "Rose Marie" has proved such a smash hit.

Some of the secrets of the recording of "Rose Marie" in the open country of the Lake Tahoe region in the high Sierras were revealed, but a specific request was made that they be not disclosed to the public. We shall respect that confidence.

On the phone, Nelson Eddy is exactly to the ear as he is from the screen. There is a friendly, resonant quality of voice that would bespeak the fine timber of its singing range, even if you never had heard Mr. Eddy sing.

In addition to a magnificent voice, as I told him over the phone, he also has the patience of Job.

By the time Betty Hynes, Eddie Melcher, Don Craig and I had finished with him, he must have been run practically ragged, mentally and temperamentally. But out of it all came one definite impression in addition to the charm and good nature of the man.

Nelson Eddy can take it!

Don't let the piles of snow and the icy streets fool you. There are still signs of spring that may not judiciously be overlooked. For instance, Mr. Melvin D. Hildreth, who knows, more about such things than any other individual in Washington, calls up to say that after a conference with the show's representatives day before yesterday he is able to report with some authority that the Ringling Brothers-Barnum & Bailey Circus, the greatest show on earth," will spread its big top in this city on Monday and Tuesday, May 18 and 19.

The feature of the show this year will be the biggest elephant alive. This long-legged and long-tusked pachyderm is being brought over from India, where he has been one of the show pieces of the Durbars and other picturesque pageants as a towering mount of the Maharajahs and other potentates of the Orient who go in for splendor on a grand scale.

To the best of my knowledge and belief, this will be the first time that the Ringling-Barnum & Bailey outfit has featured an elephant as its major attraction since the old days when Jumbo was one of the marvels of the amusement world.

Jumbo was killed by a switch engine one fatal morning in Canada and his stuffed remains now repose as one of the treasured relics of an Eastern university. Billy Rose made an earnest effort to borrow this sterling example of the taxidermist's art as an exploitation stunt in conjunction with the opening of his production of "Jumbo" in the New York Hippodrome, but the attempt ended in no dice, as we say in the back room.

Anyhow, paste the date in your hat—May 18 and 19—and hold your horses, the elephants are coming!

In the Lyons, Den.

Back in the early and middle 1920s, when Fred and Tom Waring and their Pennsylvanians used to come back East from protracted engagements on the West Coast they always insisted that the most attractive feature of any visit to Hollywood was Bebe Daniels' Sunday night suppers.

They were in the nature of a weekly rendezvous for the most interesting people in the film colony, conducted with a charming informality that made them about what has been described as "a feast of reason and flow of soul."

I now completely comprehend the viewpoint and the enthusiasm of the Warings.

On Wednesday night, Bebe and Ben Lyon entertained a congenial group of kindred spirits in their suite at the Carlton at what must have been the counterpart of one of those Sunday night suppers.

The occasion was wholly felicitous, as any occasion must be when presided over by two such perfect hosts as Mr. and Mrs. Lyon, whose week of personal appearances at the Earle unhappily came to an end last night.

There was a great deal of good natured badinage during the course of the evening—an evening that extended from about 10:45 p. m., to something like 3, or worse, in the morning. With such jesters as Bebe and Ben, the Art Reillys, Frank La Falce and one or two other alert humorists present, it was hardly to be expected that conversation would lag or wit run dry.

Recalls Last Visit.

Casually, as the evening wore on, Ben recalled his and Bebe's last visit to the Capital, when they had to desert a party in what was practically the shank of the evening to catch a train for the little Carolina town where they were to spend two or three restful days with Ben's father. This would be a respite from the incessant pursuit of admirers, autograph hunters and the hordes of others who dog the footsteps of Hollywood stars every time they appear in public. Just a nice comfortable, restful day or two of lolling about in a warm Carolina sun.

So they alighted from the train to be greeted by three or four hundred "fans" who had learned of their prospective visit. Once at the modest cottage of the elder Lyon, on a street that no one ever bothered much about and few even so much as knew was there, the big parade started. Automobiles in endless lines, pedestrians in long files and campers on the front lawn began an endless vigil of finger pointing and whispered confidences that "that is the house."

If Bebe and Ben ever had stepped foot out of the door they would have been mobbed. They had a restful two or three days, to be sure, but it was in the living-room of the Lyon home instead of out under the gentle rays of the Carolina sun.

Bebe describes it as their "cross marks the spot" vacation. From the demeanor of the mobs you would have thought that that was where the body was found!

Scores a Knockout.

Then there was the time when Ben went into the ring with a professional fighter who was deemed pretty good. Ben had boxed a good deal and was not so bad with his dukes. He had taken on some fair scrappers, sometimes in preparation for a picture in which he had to spar and, with the stipulation that they lay off his face, customarily had come out okay. But this guy was different. It was a fight.

By much the same sort of synchronized left jabs and right crosses as Harold Lloyd demonstrates in "The Milky Way," Ben finally slipped over the lethal wallop to the button and the tough pug went sleepy-bye.

"That," says Ben, "is the first and only time I ever knocked out a guy who wasn't working for me!"

Reference to Harold Lloyd and his new picture quite obviously revived pleasant recollections in Miss Daniels's mind. You will recall that she was leading woman in the Lloyd comedies as far back as the "Lonesome Luke" days, and, to my notion, the best foil the bespectacled comedian ever had—and the most beautiful.

Admires Former Co-star.

Bebe still thinks Harold Lloyd is the most substantial, the most genuine, the most thoroughly human of all the comics who lend their talents to the enlivenment of the world through the medium of the cinema. I would not be surprised if she is correct.

This is the fourth week of the tour on which Mr. and Mrs. Lyon are currently engaged. It still has several weeks to go before they will be privileged to return to Hollywood and the studios. They left Washington last night at 1 and have continuous bookings through the Middle West and then, by one of those freaks of routing, jump back to Boston for the final engagement of this swing aroung the wheel.

At one or two points their trail crosses that of Ricardo Cortez, who was at the Earle only a week ahead of them. Bebe and Rickie have worked together in pictures but not, I believe, since as far back as 1932 or '33.

Two grand persons, Bebe and Ben, who will be welcomed to the Capital as often as the booking powers can manage to bring them in. I hope that will be very often indeed.

Identification Card.

It was the consensus of opinion at the Lyon party Wednesday night that if Jay Mallory's play of "Sweet Aloes," in which Evelyn Laye is to open in the National Theater on Monday night, ever was presented in Germany it probably would be given a new name.

"Deutschland Uber Aloes," or something like that.

And don't blame that one on me!

In Belasco Anniversary Feature

As the screen feature of the bill celebrating the first anniversary of the present policy of the Belasco Theater, the cinema version of the late John Galsworthy's "Loyalties" is being shown. Above are pictured Heather Thatcher and Miles Mander in one of the most appealing scenes of the picture. The third part of stellar importance is played by Basil Rathbone, whose work in such American-made films as "David Copperfield," "Anna Karenina" and "The Last Days of Pompeii" has placed him among the foremost of motion picture "menaces." The Belasco's first year under the new policy reflects credit upon Matty Radin and his associates who now are responsible for the conduct of the famous old house.

Hollywood

By Sidney Skolsky

Candid Camera Shots

Hollywood, Feb. 19.

Every one has had his say concerning the not-to-be made flicker, "It Can't Happen Here," except Sidney Howard, who wrote the screen play. I spoke to Howard about it yesterday, before he left for New York, and Howard said: "The Hays office, after reading the scenario, advised against the filming of the picture, saying it is against the policy of the industry. They do not want to take sides in political questions. It is political censorship. Metro must admit that the picture was banned or that they are bad business men."

• • • •

Howard went on to declare that the scenario followed the book faithfully; yet he knew enough about the movies to delete the obvious objectionable material . . . The scenario makes no reference to a foreign government, or any dictator by name . . . The words "Fascism" and "Communism" are not employed once . . . Sidney Howard said it was "the toughest job" he ever did, and he feels sad that the effort is wasted . . . But he feels sadder because "a public question which concerns the public can not be told in the medium which really reaches the public."

• • • •

Clifton Webb, who quarreled with Joan Crawford, sitting on the Grace Moore set and watching Franchot Tone emote . . . One of the reasons why Marlene Dietrich doesn't care for "I Loved a Soldier" is because she has to dress as a chambermaid throughout the entire flicker . . . John O'Hara is a house guest at Dorothy Parker's, and will write his novel there . . . Tom Jenk, after seeing Gladys Swarthout in "Rose of the Rancho," said: "That's getting in the movies the hard way."

• • • •

Amazing the number of people on a set when a scene is being shot . . . There's the director and the two assistant directors . . . The cameraman and the two assistant cameramen . . . the sound man and his helpers . . . The script girl . . . The juicer and "his best boy" . . . The wardrobe girl . . . The hairdresser . . . The make-up woman . . . And the fleet of electricians and property men, not to mention the stooges . . . Yet a temperamental star shouts: "I won't play the scene if anyone is on the set" . . . A movie star often palys to a bigger audience on the set than an actor does on Broadway.

• • • •

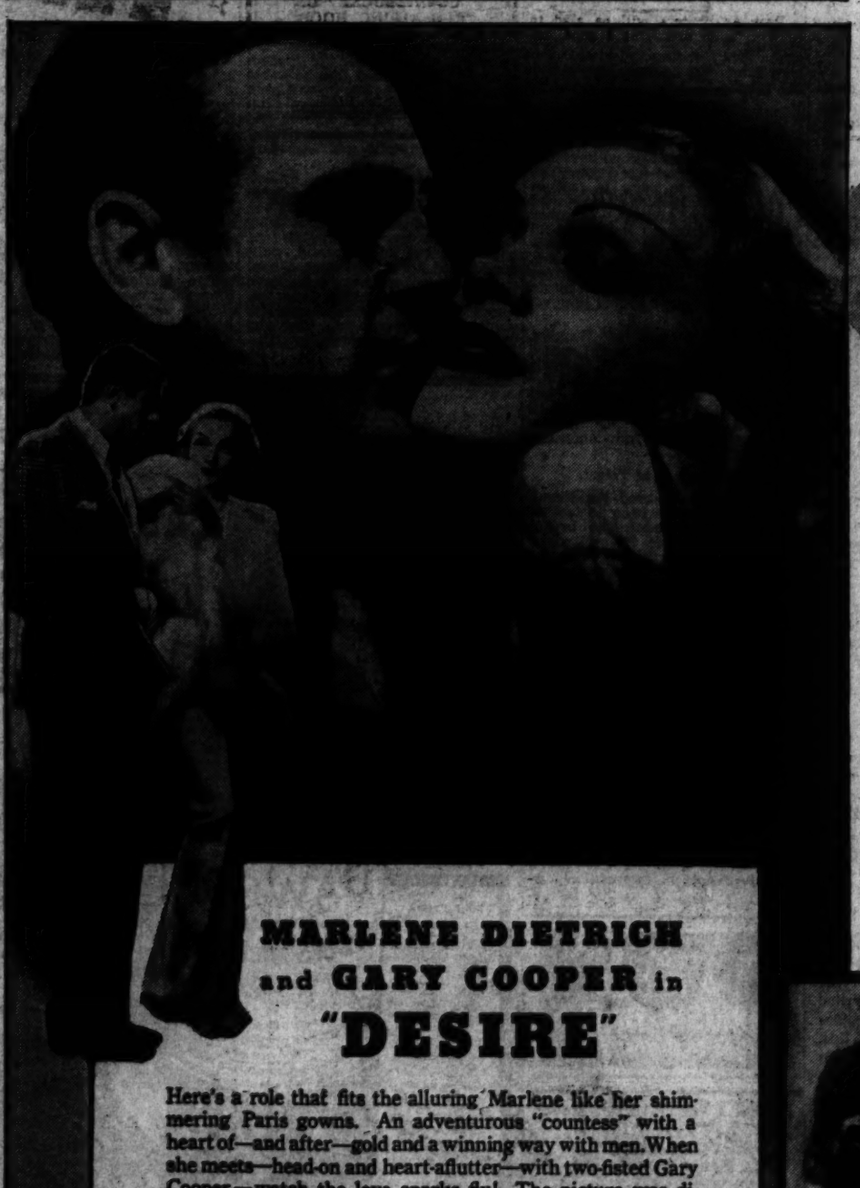
BING CROSBY ETHEL MERMAN
CHARLIE RUGGLES

Paramount captured the biggest musical stage hit in years, then went right on and made it bigger, handsomer, funnier on the screen. Added Bing, Charlie and Ida Lupino to Ethel Merman of the original cast. Added four new songs to the Cole Porter triumphs, "You're the Top", "Anything Goes" and "I Get a Kick Out of You". Built up the thrilling dance ensembles and gorgeous production scenes. Coralled 100 of Hollywood's loveliest lasses. Took on a howling new cargo of laughs. All under the brilliant direction of Lewis Milestone Result—one grand, hilarious whoop of delight!



MARLENE DIETRICH and GARY COOPER in "DESIRE"

Here's a role that fits the alluring Marlene like her shimmering Paris gowns. An adventurous "countess" with a heart of—and after—gold and a winning way with men. When she meets—head-on and heart-aflutter—with two-fisted Gary Cooper—watch the love sparks fly! The picture was directed by Frank Borzage, who made "Seventh Heaven" and "Farewell to Arms." The cast includes John Halliday, Ernest Cossart, Alan Mowbray. It's the first Dietrich-Cooper meeting since "Morocco." And if you're craving romance, this is IT!

The director is Leo McCarey, who gave you "Ruggles of Red Gap." Come and laugh till the cows come home!

Studio Gossip

MAE DOESN'T CHOOSE TO RUN ... Latest crack from Mae West, curvaceous heroine of Paramount's big March picture, "Klondike Annie," has her boosting a woman for President. "Women have been running men for years," opines Mae. "One could also run the country. But count me out. If I walked into a cabinet meeting, the boys couldn't keep their minds on the budget."

ANOTHER MILKY WAY ...Prop man of the Walter Wanger outfit shooting the big Technicolor feature, "Trail of the Lonesome Pine," up in the California mountains, had to turn farm hand. Demands for fresh milk gave thrifty prop man idea. He milked his props—a drove of contented cows.

SO MUCH DYNAMITE... Proof that an actor's life is not an easy one was plentiful at Big Bear, Cal., during the filming of Walter Wanger's "Trail of the Lonesome Pine," new Technicolor feature starring Sylvia Sidney, Fred MacMurray and Henry Fonda. More than 100 men and a dozen mules narrowly escaped injury as construction camp was dynamited for spectacular scene. Only heavy barricades saved stars and cameras.

KLONDIKE KIMONO ... Nifty negligee Mae West was ready to go into action in "Klondike Annie," Paramount's new yarn of the Yukon, when glance at script caused consternation. Script called for old-fashioned nightgown, or '90 nightie. Search of coast yielded no old-fashioned nightwear. Bright Mae suggested Japanese kimono (always chic). Cameras clicked. So did Mae!

St. John's, of Brooklyn, Rallies to Nose Out G. W. Five, 29-27

17-to-8 Lead At Half Is Erased

Shanley and Kaplinsky Star For Winners in Late Comeback.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Feb. 20.—Trailing at the half, 17 to 8, and apparently outplayed and outwitted, the St. John's University basketball team came back with a brilliant reversal of form to nose out George Washington University, 29 to 27, here tonight, and to snap a 14-game streak of the Capital city quintet.

It was indeed sweet revenge for the conquering Redmen, who for two consecutive years had been conquered by the Colonials. Moreover, it settled a high school feud between George Freilicher and Milt Schonfeld, of George Washington, and Capt. Rip Kaplinsky and Java Gotkin. These pairs had played against each other in this city many times.

Kaplinsky Is Star.

Particularly was it Kaplinsky who shone in the Redmen's triumph. Held by Schonfeld to one field goal in the first half, which was scored three seconds before the half ended, the undersized captain broke loose with five field goals and two fouls to lead St. John's back to the front.

At the same time, Tom O'Brien, who had contributed four field goals, and Ben Goldfaden, who had made three in the opening session, were limited to 5 points.

The Redmen were off form in the first 20 minutes and could ring up only two field scores.

Then came the rally by St. John's and nothing the Colonials could do could halt the comeback. Behind, 22 to 10, after Schonfeld had made 4 points and O'Brien a foul, McGuire tossed in two goals and Kaplinsky five and one foul to draw upon equal terms, 23 to 23, with six minutes to play.

O'Brien made it 25 to 23, but McGuire, Shanley and Kaplinsky tallied 6 points and St. John's was ahead, 29 to 25. O'Brien made one under the basket with a minute to play, but the Redmen stalled thereafter.

Toss Success Now Doubted By Johnson

WALTER JOHNSON, one-time "Big Train" of major league baseball, apparently gained full steam—backward—last night as the hour for his dollar-throwing attempt drew near.

Upon receiving word that the distance he is to try to throw a silver dollar across the Rappahannock River tomorrow is some 372 feet, Johnson began to have doubts he would be able to accomplish the feat.

"I feel sure a silver dollar won't sail 372 feet," he said. "I think there would be too much wind resistance. I'd take bets I could throw a baseball across, though."

Meanwhile, there developed that there was no precedent as to what stance or manner of delivery Johnson should adopt. Historians did not set down what method George Washington used.

Johnson might get a running start up to the post line and let sail, or he might employ a discus thrower's style of circling around, with arm drawn back, to gain momentum before letting go. But he said he would sail the dollar, rather than throw it, with the same old sweeping baseball delivery.

The Treasury Department yesterday came through with an okay on the tossing. A spokesman said Johnson could do what he wanted to with his dollar. If he wanted to throw it in the river it was all right and if he clears the river, "I'd like to be there to grab it," the spokesman said.

Nobody asked him, but the talkative Dizzy Dean spoke his mind about the matter yesterday. The St. Louis Cardinals' star pitcher told the Associated Press in Hot Springs, Ark., that he "could throw that far, left-handed."

Clemson Alumni Ask Conference Inquiry

Columbia, S. C., Feb. 20 (AP).—A group of Clemson College alumni recommended today that their alma mater investigate the feasibility of withdrawing from the Southern Conference and affiliating with the Southeastern Conference.

The proposal appeared in a resolution passed at what was called as a State-wide alumni meeting in protest against the new Southern Conference plan de-emphasizing athletics. Scarcely a score of persons attended.

Dartmouth Coach Ill; 'Nervously Tired Out'

Omaha, Nebr., Feb. 20 (AP).—Earl Blaik, Dartmouth College football coach, was in a hospital today "nervously tired out," the attending physician said. Blaik was advised to remain there two days. He became ill at a meeting last night of Omaha alumni of Dartmouth.

Schmarr and Lieb, Lead in Second-Half Rally for Triumph.

SACRIFICING art for the sake of points when art meant absolutely nothing and points meant the difference between victory and defeat, Catholic University's stout-hearted Cardinals came from behind to win from St. Thomas last night at Brookland. The score was 42 to 35.

Approximately 1,000 fans saw the Tommies' lead melt like a perspiring snowman in the face of Catholic's blistering counter-attack. Led by Hermie Schmarr and Capt. Bernie Lieb, the Cards staged a rally that made Garrison's finish look like a crawl.

C. U. Trails at Half.

St. Thomas led at half-time, 17-16, after the Cards' early 5-2 lead, and boosted this margin to 28-18 as the second half got under way. But the Scranton quintet couldn't maintain this pace and Catholic U. finally forged ahead at 36-35 on Zeke Brown's circus shot from the corner.

The visitors exhibited one of the smoothest passing and shooting teams seen on a local floor this winter, making numerous one-hand shots that couldn't truthfully be called fluky.

Catholic University's freshmen quintet won a bitterly contested 32-to-32 victory over Central in a preliminary to the varsity game.

Chevy Chase Star Signs With Macks

A no-hit, no-run performance against Leonardtown, supported by an impressive record of 14 victories in 16 games last summer has brought its reward to young Waters Butcher, Chevy Chase Grays pitcher, in the guise of a big league trial, it was revealed last night.

Together with Walter Johnson, jr., whose baseball plans are still indefinite, Butcher will report to the Philadelphia Athletics' training camp at Fort Myers, February 29. He mailed his signed contract to Connie Mack last night, following a telephone communication with him earlier in the week.

Butcher, a husky lad of 21 years, was discovered by a Philadelphia scout early last season at Leonardtown. Mack's agent was impressed by the youth's form and willingness. He kept close tab on Butcher's work and finally recommended him for a trial. Manager Foster, of the Grays, predicted a real future for Butcher.

Local Handball Player Loses at Minneapolis

Minneapolis, Feb. 20 (AP).—Sam Atcheson, defending champion in the National Y. M. C. A. handball Tournament, is hoping to give his daughter, Betty Lee, back home in Memphis, a birthday present of his fifth national "Y" title Saturday.

Atcheson will play in the finals Saturday if he gets by Jack Srenco, of St. Louis, tomorrow. He defeated Rudy Harris, of Minneapolis, 21-4 and 21-11 today in the quarter-finals, while Srenco set back Joe Cowley, of Washington, D. C., 21-5 and 21-4.

'Pepper' Martin Quits Holdout Ranks, Signs

Oklahoma City, Feb. 20 (AP).—John Leonard 'Pepper" Martin, who steals bases with ease and stops infield grounders with his chest, signed his 1936 contract with the St. Louis Cardinals today, saying it promised a $1,000 bonus at the end of the season if the club makes enough money.

This Morning . . .

Without Shirley Povich.

By Bill McCormick.

SOMETIMES we get just a bit weary of being a stormy petrel. One of those times came about the first two or three days after our efforts to fill up this space, which usually is devoted to the more worthy and interesting literary efforts of the boss.

Public reaction to our "Gnuts, in a word to baseball—and everything" column not only has been very wearying, but very puzzling. We received quite a few nice letters praising us for the fearless stand we took on the subject of sports in general. Lewis Francis Xavier (Guess Who) Atchison, our college department, who answered our outburst a few days later, received just as many epistles damning us for daring to besmirch great and noble sports in print. It is all too puzzling.

McCORMICK.

For instance, the first letter to reach us assured us that we had struck a note of popular approval.

"Won't you please let McCormick continue to write some more pannings of sports whenever he's in the mood," begged the epistle, which was addressed to The Editor, no less. "His column of yesterday was the most refreshing one you've had since Shirley Povich went on the loose a couple of months ago and debunked Jack Dempsey.

"Like most people who read a column and enjoy it, I wouldn't have thought of telling you about it except that I noticed this morning that some fellow named Atchison is practically apologizing for McCormick's column of yesterday. Let McCormick have his head again and say 'gnuts' all he wants to. The guy is all right; also, he knows what he is talking about."

Hardly had we finished sticking out our tongue in a most ribald manner toward the college department than Atchison received a communication.

"Thanks a lot for spanking Bill," read the fan letter to Lewis Francis Xavier (Pete for Short). "Thanks also for saying some things I had overlooked thinking, to wit, that he was 'biting the hand that fed him.' Also, if Bill just had to break out the whozzit, why in the name of all that is holy did he not take out those nostril-offending affairs that Hot Air Ahearn puts on, or the circus wrestling matches of dear old Daddy Joe?"

Our only answer to that is that we spend 52 weeks a year panning boxing in our regular Around the Ring column every Sunday and just couldn't resist the impulse to pan things in general here.

"Dear Bill: Just read your column substituting for Mr. Povich and enjoyed it no end. I wish you hadn't worn the hat in the picture so I could really see how well my pet name for you fits. My pet name is 'Screwbaldy'." . . .

There can be no answer to that.

Lewis Francis Xavier (Tony) Atchison also received another letter which was very interesting. It came from Clark Griffith, who is remotely interested in big league baseball, and read as follows:

"I read your comeback at our friend McCormick's kick at sports in general, and that story was surely well written and I am sure that everyone in sports appreciates the stand you have taken.

"I have been wondering whether McCormick was trying to kid or whether he really had a sour stomach the day he wrote that column."

Mr. Griffith, you'll just have to keep guessing about whether we were kidding or had a tummy ache when we wrote that column. We often have asked ourselves the same question about your condition the day you traded Al Crowder and Goose Goslin to Detroit.

One for our side came from a prominent Midwestern sports editor, a man who has been in the business for many years, who wrote us—in strictest confidence—that we had hit the nail on the head, but the crowning blow came from an anonymous correspondent who asked:

"Dear Poison Puss: Isn't there anything in sports you like?"

That is the most unkindest cut of all. Of course there are things in sport we like. Tauromaquia, or bull fighting, is one of our favorite sports. To us, nothing equals the thrill of the grand march; of the sight of the picadores diverting the bull's attention as they deftly insert their lances into the enraged toro's skin; of the skill of the banderillos as they shoot their barbed darts into de bool's person. All this, of course, only serves to whet our appetite for the grand climax when the matador stabs his estoque into a spot the size of half a dollar between the eyes, to be greeted by shouts of "Viva el matador"—or, if he misses, cries of "Viva el bool" or whatever it is they cry.

Of course, we never have seen a bull fight, but it still is one of our favorite sports.

Curling, the Scottish pastime played upon the ice, also is one of our favorites. Nothing in the way of winter sports can offer a thrill equal to the kick of a good healthy "whoosh" in a curling game. We never have seen a curling game, either, but it still is one of our favorites.

Hurling, the game our Mr. Benjamin Bane Dulaney, of the intelligentsia, describes as the contest in which a given number of Irishmen are placed on the field against an equal number of Irishmen, both sides are armed with clubs and brickbats to throw and the last man alive wins, also is another of our favorites. The fact that we never have seen a hurling game, either, does not keep it from being one of our most beloved pastime—"shure an' tiz a grand thing."

Dicing, or Harlem Polo, is another of our favorites. We cannot truthfully say that we never have seen a dicing contest. As a matter of fact, we not only have seen a dicing contest or two, but on occasion have participated in this thrilling sport. Dicing is perhaps our favorite favorite. It is our ambition to organize a team from U street to capture the Olympic laurels now held, we believe, by the Ethiopian representatives.

America Seen Facing Test At Berlin

Rivals in Asia and Europe Have Risen Rapidly in Recent Years.

By Alan Gould

Associated Press Sports Editor.

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—Despite the flock of record-smashers available, America's time-honored ability to capture a majority of the so-called field events will be severely tested in the Olympic track and field sports at Berlin this summer.

At Los Angeles four years ago Uncle Sam's lads took five of the nine events calling for agility, versatility or talent for heaving a variety of implements around the premises. This included the decathlon, won by Jarring Jim Bausch, of Kansas. We also took the broad jump, shot-put, discus, and pole vault, but the foreign talent pressed hard in these events, besides winning the hop-step-and-jump, the high jump, the hammer throw and the javelin.

Rivals Develop.

A few facts and figures will show how sensatipnally America's rivals in Asia as well as Europe have developed in the last few years. The first Japanese to clear 14 feet in the pole vault, Nishida, took second place at Los Angeles. Another Japanese, Nambu, holds world records for both the hop-step-and-jump and the running broad jump, although two American Negroes have since eclipsed the latter mark. There are two other 26-foot jumpers in Japan.

Harald Anderson, of Sweden, holds the new discus world record of 171 feet 11¾ inches. A German, Hans Sievert, has shattered all decathlon records since the last Olympics. The Finns, led by Matti Jarvinen, monopolize the javelin records and have no American rivals.

No Shortage of Talent.

From the home-bred standpoint, however, there has been no lack of amazing improvement. The broad-jumping of Eulace Peacock, who won the national title at 26 feet 3 inches, and Jesse Owens, who shattered all records with a tremendous leap of 26 feet 8½ inches, indicates no shortage of talent in this specialty. Keith Brown, of Yale, pole vaulted to a new world mark of 14 feet 5⅛ inches last spring, while Southern California's latest two stars, Earle Meadows and William Sefton, both have cleared 14 feet, with something to spare.

Jack Torrance, another American star to develop since the last Olympics, holds the new world shotput record of 57 feet 1 inch, but he has yielded the current indoor spotlight to a newcomer. "Dimmy" Zaltz, of Boston College, who achieved 52 feet 7½ inches last Saturday. There's also John Lyman, the Stanford star, who has come close to 55 feet in competition outdoors.

13 Expected To Start in Big Race

3 Other Turf Aces, Now On Doubtful List, May Get Call.

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Feb. 20.—This business of "bettering the breed of horses" reaches very serious proportions Saturday, for the Santa Anita race track is dangling $100,000 in the collective face of the Nation's horse owners. There promises to be much excitement before the Los Angeles Jockey Club presents the checks; in fact, just which horses will start in the mile and a quarter classic has the turf writers scratching their heads and the West Coast sophisticated race goers in a state of eager anticipation.

From what I gathered in one sweeping glance over the shoulders of half the Nation's turf experts, I have come to the conclusion that my guess is as good as any. So, I'm going to say that 13 horses will face the barrier, or, rather, 13 appear to be certain starters. There is a possibility that three others, now on the doubtful list, may accept the issue.

Those that seem certain to be in the parade postward are Discovery, Time Supply, Top Row, Rosemont, Tick On, Howard, He Did, Whopper, Singing Wood, Thursday, Aerial Cross, Pompeys Pillar and either Azucar or Dark Winter. In my "doubtful starter" group, I'm putting Preeminent, Whopper's stablemate from Florida; Riskulus, and Azucar or Dark Winter.

Fred Alger, jr., whose colors were borne to victory last year by Azucar, can't make up his mind whether he will start Azucar or Dark Winter or both.

From all I can gather, there is little chance for a fast track Saturday. I don't know whether or not there was a supreme court ruling against California's sun, but old Sol, as I've heard him called, has been conspicuous by his absence for some two weeks. There was a pink glow along the Western fringe of the dark cloud bank at sunset today, but the local Weather Bureau countered with a prediction of rain tomorrow.

The chartmakers were complimenting the track today by calling it slow. Air Squadron, winner of the second race today, could do no better than 1:14 1-5 for 6 furlongs. Which isn't good even it is is Charlestown time for a fast course. Among those pulling for a fast track is Hal Price Eadley. He has worked himself into a state of frenzy at the prospects of Whopper, the Florida champion, but he says that he wants the dust to show before he will back the chances of his big horse.

The majority of turf writers and turf regulars that I contacted today seemed to think it was Discovery all the way.

Thursday, formerly owned by Selby Burch, of Washington, has hardly been mentioned in the press-box discussions of the race. He is being treated like the selling plater he once was, but he is a solid, well-conditioned horse. Riskulus, Whopper, Singing Wood have a scattered backing. But no matter how you juggle them, the form charts still point to Discovery, Top Row and Time Supply, or, perhaps, just Discovery.

Young Minneapolis Golfer Downs Mrs. Solomon by 5 and 4.

By the Associated Press.

PALM BEACH, Fla., Feb. 20.—Patty Berg, conqueror yesterday of National Champion Glenna Collett Vare, and Maureen Orcutt Crews, the brilliant Miami stylist, fought their way today to the final of the annual Palm Beach woman's golf tournament.

The Minneapolis schoolgirl, sensation of Florida's winter season, played emphatic golf in eliminating Mrs. Leon Solomon, Memphis, Tennessee State champion, 5 and 4, in today's semifinal round.

Mrs. Crews, who has played spectacular golf throughout the winter season, was harder pressed, but finally edged out Marion Miley, Lexington, Ky., another champion of her home State, 2 and 1.

Play starts at 2:30 p. m. in the final.

Had Headache.

A headache that nagged her about half-way out failed to stifle today the brilliance of the youngster's game.

Out in 39, only five over men's par despite two booming drives that swerved out of bounds, Patty turned four up and, staving off Mrs. Solomon's brief rally that took the ninth and tenth holes, polished off her opponent at the fourteenth green.

The tall, brunette Miss Miley, another promising younger star whose fine 76 won her medal honors in the qualifying round, fought the seasoned Mrs. Crews on even terms throughout the first nine, which both played in 38.

Makes Her Bid.

Coming back, the veteran unleashed par golf to win the tenth, eleventh and twelfth and go 3 up. After halving the thirteenth in par 4's, Miss Miley made her bid for victory. Her 5 took the 386-yard par 4 fourteenth as Mrs. Crews topped her second shot and needed six strokes. Her sound par 4 at the 395-yard fifteenth was good to win when her opponent took three shots to the green and two putts.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., Feb. 20.—A new competitive record for Lakewood Country Club links and a one-stroke lead over the field of the $2,500 St. Petersburg Open golf championships were the property of Paul Runyan, professional from White Plains, N. J., today.

Runyan cracked par with a 68, three better than regulation figures, and was one stroke over a field of more than 80 professionals and amateurs, including most of the big names of golf.

Three Break Par.

Several Shoot 73s.

Austria May Receive Sympathy in Threat

Vienna, Feb. 20 (AP).—Austria's threat not to participate in the summer Olympic games in Berlin might find a sympathetic response from other nations, Viennese newspapers said today as the athletic controversy with Germany continued to rage.

Austria has been deeply offended by Germany's decision not to send a team to the International Ski Federation's meet at Innsbruck, starting tomorrow, after originally promising to do so. There were hints that Austria might feel obliged to withdraw from the Olympics.

Maryland and Georgetown to Resume Court Rivalry Tonight

Hoyas Given Slight Edge In Battle

WITH all left-hooks, flying tackles and eye-gouging barred, Georgetown's energetic G-Men and the tempestuous Terrapins of Maryland will meet tonight at Tech High School in a 40-minute rough-house basketball battle that ranks as one of Washington's outstanding winter sports attractions. It will be the second annual battle between the two, and the opening tap-off will be tossed up at 8:30 o'clock.

On paper the teams appear to be evenly matched with a slight edge—if any—in Georgetown's favor. Both have been so consistently inconsistent throughout the season that the only thing expected to run true to form is the officiating of Mr. Paul Menton, Baltimore sports authority, who sweated off five years of his natural life in their game last winter at College Park.

Georgetown, with impressive victories over New York University, Pittsburgh, Penn State, West Virginia and others, and unimpressive defeats by various and sundry others has the benefit of a week's rest before the game. Coach Fred Mesmer has 15 fresh and capable men to hurl at the enemy and probably will avail himself of most of them. Georgetown should be ready and able—physically—for the test.

Maryland, equally impressive in defeating Navy, North Carolina and a few others of similar caliber, and then depressingly dull against Johns Hopkins and lesser lights, is playing its third game of the week. The first two were exhausting mentally and otherwise, and it may be that the Terps will be a little weary after a few minutes of mad romping.

Last year's game, which Georgetown unexpectedly won, 26-25, on "Sis" Esenstadt's foul shot, evolved into the most exciting sports spectacle local fans had seen in years. Tonight's may go it one better.

Simon, of Kann's, Rolls 459, Loop Record Set

While Woodward & Lothrop held on to a slim one-half game margin by stopping Raleigh Haberdasher in two games last night at the Recreation drives, Irwin Simon, secretary of the Department Store League, was making league history on the next alleys. Rolling with the second place Kann's Sons Team, Simon aided in three wins with a league record set of 459, chalking up games of 166, 132, and 161. The mark is not only an all-time league record, but is also the highest three game set rolled in league competition in the District this season. Palais Royal was the victim of the record set match.

Ida Weinberg, of the Internal Revenue team, added her name to the free list for participation in the Lorraine Gulli sweepstakes tomorrow night at the Convention Hall alleys, topping 13 contestants in a preliminary stakes for the free entry, last night, at the Arcadia alleys with a three-game set of 325. Helen O'Dea finished second with 310 and Rose Roberts, with 294, was third.

Seven Teams Will Vie In Alexandria Tourney

Alexandria, Va., Feb. 29.—Seven teams will take part in the second half of the Alexandria Junior League that opens next Wednesday afternoon. The following teams had representatives at today's meeting and presented eligibility lists: Flashes, Sparrows, Post Senators, Celtics, Dukes and Rosemounts. The last named club is a new addition of the league.

At today's session it was decided to allow each team ten players instead of eight as was the rule in the first half; teams will be allowed ten minutes grace if they are not able to muster a full team before a forfeit will be given their opponent.

Heurich Flashes Win.

Action in Girls' A. A. U. Game

Anna Honaback, number one, of United Typewriter girls, is pictured on the floor as Virginia Jones, a teammate, prepares to scoop the ball up in last night's District A. A. U.-Post championship games at Heurich gym between the Typos and Agricultures. The Typewriter team won easily.

Sandy Springs Girls Win In A.A.U.

Sandy Springs, presenting two versatile shooters in Maxine Cuff and Lulu Trundle, swamped the Highlands, a team from the University of Maryland, 45-5.

The Typos, undefeated in 16 straight games, disposed of the Agriculture, 38-11, with Virginia Jones clicking off 21 points.

In the third and most exciting game of the night, Mount Rainier made a Garrison finish to tie Garfield at 12-all. They will have a replay in the next week or so. A foul goal by Louise Garilli, Mount Rainier, left forward, with 15 seconds left to play, enabled the Prince Georges County lassies to knot the count.

Miss Cuff scored 25 points and Miss Trundle 20 points for the champion Sandy Spring team.

At 7:30 Bovello Plumbers meet D. C. Fire Department;; at 8:30, National Capital Parks opposes Rockville, and at 9:30 Bliss Electrical School takes on the crack Heurich Senate Beer team.

The Heurich Senators and Bovello have unusually powerful teams and hot games are expected.

Zaharias Bows To Joe Cox In Upset

Year's Record Crowd Sees 'Underdog' Triumph in 25 Minutes.

By George Considine.

JOE COX, the Kansas City iron man-of-muscle, who has proved to be the sensation of the indoor wrestling season, stunned a capacity crowd last night at the Turner Arena by upsetting big, bad Gorge (Cry Baby) Zaharias, of Colorado, after 25 minutes of unmitigated mayhem.

The match was halted by Referee Cyclone Burns when Zaharias, who in a recent sports writers poll was conceded the best chance of succeeding Danno O'Mahony to the world championship, gave up under the punishing pressure of a reverse armlock.

Foul Tactics.

It was only on rare occasions throughout the extremely rough session that Cox could successfully combat the foul tactics of the ponderous Greek. But when he did make up his mind to retaliate he made surprising progress.

Before a record crowd for the season, Cox, for the first 20 minutes, took no end of strangles and knee-butts-in-the-tummy. But then, obviously realizing that his only chance lay in returning evil for evil, Cox cut loose with a barroom wallop to knock Zaharias to the concrete floor. It was when he returned with that bad shoulder that Cox grabbed his arm with such punishing vigor that Zaharias was more than willing to admit he couldn't take it.

Dean Detton Wins.

In the semifinal Dean Detton, by far the most pleasing "crowd pleaser" Promoter Joe Turner has yet imported, airplane-spun Dr. Harry Fields into oblivion in 41 minutes. It was really very dramatic the way Detton picked up his mountainous opponent and bounced him on the ropes, preparatory to the spinning.

Once again virtue was triumphant as Vic Christy, the oh-so-handsome Californian, destroyed villainous Jim Wallis with a flying buckus, or something, after 15½ minutes of bristling action.

Rusty Westcoatt, former University of Honolulu swimming star, spoiled a beautiful losing streak by drop-kicking Fearless Floyd Marshall in the 19½-minute opener.

Boys Club League.

All of last night's winners in the Boys Club League, particularly Y. M. C. A. 115-pounders, thrashed their opponents by lop-sided margins. The youthful "Y" tossers spanked the Boys Club Nationals, 29-2, and Northeast won from the Fleetwings, 21-9. Other results were Northeast, 32; Georgetown, 12; and Georgetown, 23, Boys Club Varsity, 12.

Virginia Tankmen Face G. W. Today

Special Dispatch to The Post.

University, Va., Feb. 20.—Virginia swimmers, who have changed coaches in midseason without losing a meet, face stiff opposition tomorrow, when George Washington University comes to the memorial gymnasium pool. It will be the last home meet of the winter for the Cavaliers, who face Washington and Lee next week in Lexington, then go to compete in the Conference tourney at Duke University early in March.

Charlie Prince, of Cheraw, S. C., captain last year, began as coach of the Virginia tankmen, but illness forced him to turn the job over to John Montague, of Roanoke, who was captain the year before. Both student coaches are enrolled in the department of medicine.

Though handicapped by lack of divers and the recent loss of several regulars, the Virginia swimmers have won from Duke, William and Mary, Johns Hopkins and the Richmond Y. M. C. A.

Terrapins Pick Ring Tourney Line-up

THE University of Maryland's delegates to the Southern Conference boxing tournament scheduled next week at Charlottesville, Va., were announced yesterday pending the outcome of tomorrow's match with Army at West Point.

Virtually the same team that faces Army will be sent in quest of conference crowns, but, of course, serious injury to any one of the eight battlers would preclude all possibility of his appearing in the tourney. Five lettermen are included in the group.

Most prominent of these is Ivan Nedomatsky, sleek-haired 145-pounder, who punched his way to the lightweight title last winter after a highly successful campaign during the regular season. Although not as impressive in his dealings with the heavier lads this season, Nedomatsky still remains a potent threat in his class.

Hopes Hinge on Trio.

Maryland's hopes of making its presence felt and respected at Charlottesville are invested in Spike Webb, fighting lightweight, Mike Lombardo, veteran 155-pounder, and Johnny Gormley, promising light-heavyweight who went to the semi-finals last year.

As a whole the Terrapins were impressive last year in tying Duke for second-place conference honors. Lombardo lost in the 165-pound class finals, while Tom Birmingham, 125-pounder, and Webb, fighting in the 145-pound class, were eliminated in the semifinals. None has been overly impressive this year, however, and thus far have not been rated as serious championship contenders.

This will mark the first tournament appearance of Johnny Birkland, heavyweight, Blair Smith, 165-pounder and Charley Gebhardt or Ed Shegogue, who will be entered in the 115-pound lists.

Openers Won By Eastern, Bethesda

G. W. High, Mount Rainier Bow in First Round of Tournament.

IN the opening round of play in the Metropolitan tournament at the Tech gym yesterday, Eastern, District champion, kept its slate clean so far as high and prep schools are concerned, by soundly trouncing George Washington High, of Alexandria, 53 to 18. The nightcap saw Bethesda-Chevy Chase defeat Mount Rainier in a thrilling battle, 27 to 21.

With Chic Hollidge and Dope Dean leading the way, the public school titleholders were off to a flying start and by the end of the first quarter were out in front, 12-3. The same lads carried the brunt of the burden in the second period to coast to an easy 23-8 advantage at half-time.

Starting the second half Clint Quantrille and Buddy Shaner found the hoop for neat shots that gave the winners a spurt that the Presidents were never able to overcome. From this point on it was just a matter of time how many points Eastern would score.

The Mount Rainier-Bethesda-Chevy Chase game stole yesterday's show because the two teams were so evenly matched. Except for a few minutes in the second quarter, when it looked as if the Lelanders were pulling away from the losers, it was anybody's game up until the final gong.

A second quarter shooting spree gave the Lelanders a 15-6 lead at half time. But the District Liners came back strong in the final stanza to pull up 19-17. It was nip-and-tuck until Lozupone and Putnam sank beautiful shots from the floor to bag the game for Bethesda.

Eastern and Bethesda-Chevy Chase meet at 3 p. m. tomorrow to decide the tournament championship. The game will be played on the same floor. In a preliminary, the strong Fredericksburg girls' team will meet Sherwood High. This is the first time that girls have played in the tournament.

Blair High Defeats Damascus, 27-26

Montgomery Blair High was forced into overtime against Damascus yesterday to retain its runner-up post among Montgomery County schools, a scoring spree by Shorb and Robertson in the extra period accounting for a 27-to-26 victory on the Damascus court.

At best on the tiny court, where they nearly upset Rockville a week ago, the hosts were leading the favorite Silver Spring team, 8 to 7, at half time, but fell back, 15-14, at the end of the third period. Hawkins shooting gave them a point lead with a minute to go, but Robertson arched one to put the Blairites ahead, only to see Cline tie it with a free shot at the whistle.

Miss Bam, $21.30 Shot, Wins at Hialeah

Ugin, Choice In Feature, Second

Filly 1½-Length Victor; Nightcap Rallies to Finish Third.

By the Associated Press.

HIALEAH PARK, Fla., Feb. 20. Miss Bam, a $21.30-for-$2 shot made a flock of Florida Derby eligibles look bad in winning the St. Petersburg Purse of 7 furlongs here this afternoon. A. G. Tarn, Winnipeg horseman, who won the second leg of the local trainers' race, had the daughter of Blazes in prime condition and the filly scored by a length and a half over Branncastle Farm's Ugin. A. W. Abbott's Nightcap lost the place by a length.

Miss Bam, which ran for $1,250 in a claiming affair at Tropical Park, finished her journey over a heavy track in 1:27 flat. A cloudburst this morning flooded the racing strip.

Eleven 3-year-olds went postward. All except the winner, Crinoline and Reaping were named for the Florida Derby. Ugin closed favorite. He was in close quarters during the running. Nightcap had to overcome a messy start and showed a winning effort in taking the show.

Johnny Longden, one of the leading local riders, gave Miss Bam a splendid ride. His mount was away slowly, but Johnny bided his time while improving the filly's position on the outside in the best going. The Tarn banner bearer reached the leaders at the top of the stretch and wore down Faust, the one to set the pace, at the eighth pole. Miss Bam then moved clear and held Ugin safe in a drive. Nightcap easily beat the staggering Faust.

Owner-trainer Tarn and Jockey Longden made it two straight when Blue Day, a $5.30 choice in the field of six sprinters, romped off an easy winner of the sixth purse.

JOHNNYCAKE outbroke his field, sprinted into an easy lead in the first six furlongs, rallied nicely when challened and outstayed SONGMAKER under a hard drive. SONGMAKER, slow to get into full stride, improved his position on the outside, gained steadily and fought it out willingly nearing the end. BARBARA A. held a contending position during the early running, but faltered during the closing furlongs.

JOHN TIO, a keen factor in the early racing, took command when nearing the final bend, drew clear entering the homestretch and had enough in reserve to hold THUMBS DOWN safe during the final drive. THUMBS DOWN was rushed hard when obtaining racing room on the inside, rallied nicely while in the thick of contention and outstayed BYRDEX in the closing test. BYRDEX moved up strongly midway of the last turn, but weakened after being straightened into the homestretch.

CHANTING, at home in the going, bumped PEGOTTY ANN and GOYA at the start, took command in the opening furlong, displayed good speed and held SOPHIA TUCKER safe under slight pressure. SOPHIA TUCKER raced in nearest pursuit of the winner from the start, responded to severe urging and outstayed CLOUDS. Latter, hard ridden and prominent early, finished with good courage on the inside approaching the finish.

MISS BAM, away well, but outrun for the first five furlongs, circled her field when moving up and determinedly when reaching the homestretch, then came willingly after displacing the leaders in the final furlong. UGIN, steadied close to FAUST after being displaced, rallied nicely to regain a short lead midway of the stretch drive, but weakened nearing the finish. NIGHTCAP, slow to get going, came through a wide opening entering the homestretch and finished stoutly while in tight quarters next to the inside.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BLUE DAY, $5.30, $3.40, $2.70; LOLSCHEN, $4.90, $3.10; LORD TOURNAMENT, $3.10.

BLUE DAY, keen within striking distance of the leaders while racing on the inside, challenged strongly when reaching the turn, came through on the inside of LORD TOURNAMENT and won with much to spare. LOLSCHEN raced in the first flight and finished determinedly. LORD TOURNAMENT was hurried along from the beginning, drew clear midway of the turn, but faltered out badly in the closing furlong.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Went to post at 5:44. Off at 5:52. Start fair. Won easily; place, driving. Winner, George La Flesh's b. g. (5), by Bright Knight—Sun Hope. Trained by John Hicks. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:40 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—RED ROD, $5.40, $3.70, $3.10; LATTIVICH, $6.10, $4.20; JAMES BOY, $16.40.

RED ROD, partial to the going, went into contention readily, swung to the outside when engaging LATTIVICH, assumed command midway of the homestretch and drew out smartly. LATTIVICH had much speed to sprint into a clear lead, saved ground, but was no match for the winner when collared. JAMES BOY, away slowly, secured racing room on the inside and closed a big gap.

Pelley Asks Halt in Laws For Railroads

Pending Bills Would Add $20 a Car to Freight Cost, He Says.

New York, Feb. 20.—What the railroads need as much as anything else is the adoption of a policy, National and State, to stop further legislation or regulations which only add to the cost of railroad operation, J. J. Pelley, president of the Association of American Railroads, told the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers here today. Referring to bills affecting labor on railroads pending, Mr. Pelley declared that their enactment would add more than $20 to the cost of transporting each carload of freight.

"All that can practically be done will be done by the railroads to reduce their operating costs," he said, "whether in the direction of unification of terminals, reduction of waste in methods of service, or in other ways.

Savings Would Be Offset.

"But what advantage will come to shippers or to railroads if the money saved must at once be taken out of the cash drawer to pay increased costs of operation resulting from new legislation or regulations which make impossible continued economies for the railroads without adding anything to their safety, service or revenues?

"There are now pending in Congress such bills as the so-called six-hour-day bill for railroad employes, which would change the basis for pay and overtime from the present standard day of eight hours to a standard of six hours; the train limit bill, which in effect, would limit freight trains to less than 70 cars or not in excess of one-half mile; and the so-called full crew bill, which would require additional men on many classes of trains where they are needed. On the basis of traffic for a normal year, enactment of these bills would add a billion dollars to the cost of railroad operation. That amounts to an additional cost of more than $20 for every carload of freight moved on the railroads."

National Dairy Plans To Spend $10,000,000

New York, Feb. 20 (AP).—Expenditures in excess of $10,000,000 will be made for new buildings, machinery and equipment during 1936, Thomas H. McInnerney, president of National Dairy Products Corporation, said today.

Construction will start at once on a $1,000,000 milk plant in St. Louis, Mo., McInnerney said. The St. Louis facilities will occupy an entire city block.

Gold and Balances Increase in Week

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board's condition statement of Reserve banks last night showed the inward flow of gold was resumed during the week ended February 19, net additions of $5,000,000 bringing total stocks to $10,160,000,000.

The reversal followed two weeks of outward movements, during which time it was cheaper to ship actual bullion than to buy exchange in meeting foreign commitments.

Member bank reserve balances rose $48,000,000 during the week to a total of $5,832,000,000, which was about $3,040,000,000 in excess of legal requirements.

Currency Rule Recovery Key, Gannett Says

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 20.—Frank E. Gannett advocated today the establishment of a controlled and managed currency as the keystone of economic recovery in the United States.

In an address prepared for delivery before the Technical Association of the Pulp and Paper Industry, Gannett, the publisher of the Gannett newspapers, declared the orthodox gold standard which maintains a fixed dollar price for gold has proved inadequate.

"Examination of the trend of monetary thinking outside the United States seems to make it perfectly clear that tomorrow's money will not be the gold standard money which we used to know," he said.

"It will be money managed to keep it stable in purchasing power, managed so as to prevent disastrous inflation and equally disastrous deflation.

"I am not an alarmist, but I fear that America will not be safe from what has happened in some of the countries of Europe, if we don't put millions of idle men back to work and take more millions off our relief rolls."

It was a mistake, he said, to fix the price of gold at $35 an ounce, and he pointed out the success sterling countries have had in managing their currency by using a changing price of gold as one of the major operating levers.

Failures Show Decline.

New York, Feb. 20 (AP).—Commercial failures during the short week ended February 13 were 194, against 209 the previous week and 226 in the like period last year, Dun & Bradstreet report.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively, A Special Correspondent.

Rails, Motors, Steels and Oils Improve in Active Trading; Government Bonds Higher.

New York, Feb. 20.—Bullishness in security markets was restrained by the memory of early week setbacks and the timidity upon the part of newcomers to the buying side with respect to a temporary decline, but evidence was ample that on the inside Wall street and the country are firmly committed to higher prices. Profit taking was sufficient to give the market an irregular appearance, but most of the leading stocks improved on moderate volume and on a railroad rally the late prices reached the top of the day. Government bonds advanced. May wheat closed five-eighths of a cent higher at 99 cents a bushel.

Steel common was a foundation of strength for the market through. It opened a small fraction higher and edged forward until near the close, when it set its best price of the day. Other stocks to hold strength were Great Northern, which reached a new high price; New York Central, International Nickel, Chrysler and Southern Pacific. Railroad stocks became the feature of the last hour trading, and a number of them worked into new high ground. Favorites were Northern Pacific, Baltimore, Erie, Delaware & Hudson, Lehigh, Lackawanna, Canadian Pacific and Atlantic Coast Line.

Motor shares were more prominent than the rails in the early trading. A smart race was staged between two low-priced issues, with Studebaker holding the lead. Chrysler made a new top, 2 points or so from 100, setting the best price since 1929. General Motors duplicated its best price in the last five or six years. Three stocks which ordinarily appear only once or twice a year were tape visitors. Big Four showed a gain of 36⅛ points on the first sale in a month. Cleveland & Pittsburgh special and Rensselaer & Saratoga rose 3¾ and 12½ points, respectively, on the first sale this year.

National Biscuit.

While accountants might differ on the question of charging strike expenses, National Biscuit, in its annual report for 1935, has taken one step that might well be followed by other companies producing consumers goods. The company has set out that $721,451 was the cost to it of the labor troubles it had last year. The amount was charged to insurance and contingent reserves instead of to current earnings, but the charge amounted to 11 cents a share and stockholders were informed just how much a strike costs on the expense side. Unfortunately that by no means tells the whole story, for the most important losses lay elsewhere. For the stockholders they consisted of loss of markets during the strike period; for the public, as a general rule if not in this particular instance, the cost must be reckoned in higher food costs. No company can produce indefinitely at a loss and its costs, from strikes or taxes, must be passed on to consumers.

Building Shares.

Oils were firm, with Jersey at a new high. Equipments hardened with rails. Steels were a bit irregular, as were chemicals. Strength in building shares was a feature of the market, with Manville climbing 4 points. Foods were uncertain. Corn Products jumped more than 4 points. National Dairy was active and higher on some news regarded as bullish. National Biscuit was lower on its earnings. Metals were heavy and amusements were unsettled by breaks in Columbia and Loew's.

Foreign exchanges were dull and promise to grow more so with the approach of the religious holidays. The gold currencies were a shade higher. Sterling was unchanged and nothing in the news at home or abroad suggested any reason for activity or wide fluctuations.

In times past, when the money market was not smothered with billions of excess reserves, the approach of March 1 was the signal for a hardening in interest rates. Nothing of the sort is likely this year, although the demand for funds seems to be slowly rising. Currency circulation at least is increasing, as are also loans on securities.

One of the rumors going the rounds is that banks plan to raise the rate for call and time money to 1 per cent, or to 1¼ per cent. There is no question but that they would like to do it, but with money unlent at the present pegged rates every day, nobody can see how another boost can be given without making undecutting so profitable as to ruin the present pegging system. Just now it seems that nothing can be done to lift present artificial levels any higher.

Taxation.

Consumers in the end pay the bill for the cost of producing what they buy and it would do a great deal of good if they were informed just what created the expense. They know vaguely that a certain amount covers raw material, labor and then, if possible, the producer takes a profit to cover his capital involved. They rarely think of the big role played by taxation and other costs, as strikes, which are out of control of the management but which often are well within the control of the public. The small consumer doesn't pay income taxes, but he ought to realize how much indirect tax he pays for his food and clothing and other goods when he supports measures which create high taxes.

Building Stocks.

Building construction stocks, after a few weeks of inactivity and weakness, at last found friends, possibly because the forecasters are predicting the end of the long, hard winter. The industry is a unit in expecting a strong revival in construction this spring and summer. Reports have been heard of some stern competition in the roofing trades, but in general the building company stocks seem to have taken their prospects with proper caution. Among the strong issues today were Manville, Radiator, Thompson-Starrett—a favorite because of its low price—and Penn-Dixie Cement. Naturally, the steel companies for the most part will profit from building's revival.

Treasury Expenditure.

On the fifteenth of every month the Treasury recapitulates, comparing with a year ago all the recovery and relief expenditure actually made in the fiscal year periods ending on the fifteenth of the month. The February statement discloses that total recovery and relief outlays to that date were $2,081,643,885, compared with $2,216,328,465 in the corresponding period a year ago. WPA, which this year has spent $452,932,118 (including swindle costs), is the biggest rathole. A year ago it had not begun to function, but last year's big spender, FERA, has spent this fiscal year only $482,784,432, compared with $1,076,837,741 in the corresponding period a year ago. Most of the so-called revolving funds are now revolving in the Treasury's direction, taking in more than they lend or pay out, with the notable exception of the Commodity Credit Corporation, which might turn some money back to the Treasury if it could get out of the cotton business.

Plan for Paying Commercial Dividend

Robert C. Baldwin, receiver of the Commercial National Bank of Washington, announces the following plan for payment of the third dividend in the amount of 10 per cent authorized by Mr. J. F. T. O'Connor, Comptroller of the Currency.

"The doors will be open, beginning Monday, February 24, from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. daily, except Saturday, when the hours will be from 9 a. m. to 1 p. m. All creditors are required to bring their receiver's certificates for endorsement of this dividend, and no dividend checks will be issued unless this certificate is presented. Where accounts are in joint names, both parties must sign the receipt for check.

"Where accounts are in the hands of executors, administrators, guardians or trustees, by court appointment, an up-to-date certification of appointment must be produced. Payment will be made by checks of the comptroller of the currency only, and no cash will be given.

"All available windows at the bank will be open, yet it is requested, to avoid congestion, that those who can conveniently do so, kindly postpone claiming dividends for several days, since checks can be obtained later at any time suited to their convenience."

Jane Scarlett, Loser in Suit, Seeks Divorce

Husband Is Served With Papers After Victory On Annulment.

Holding testimony introduced by attorneys for Jane Cooke Scarlett, comely Chevy Chase heiress, failed to show fraud or even a reasonable amount of duress, Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat, sitting in Equity Court, yesterday dismissed her plea for annulment of her runaway marriage with George Stanton Scarlett III, the "Romeo" of her father's garage.

Immediately after the grey-haired jurist had announced his verdict, lawyers for Mrs. Scarlett served her young husband with notice of suit for a limited divorce.

In her divorce proceedings the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard De Dalden Cooke will seek allmony, on the grounds that she is not self-supporting, and lives with an aunt—presumably Mrs. John J. Madigan, of the Broadmoor Apartments.

Notice of the suit was served on Scarlett as his face was wreathed in smiles at Justice Wheat's ruling. He had just risen to put on his coat and leave with his father, Capt. George Stanton Scarlett, 2d, who attended the last day's session.

"I've got nothing to say just now," he stated.

"I'll tell you what, though—I'm going home to North Carolina with dad tonight. I'm going home."

At the pronouncement of Justice Wheat Mrs. Scarlett's face fell. She, too, refrained from commenting on the three-day legal battle, which at times had assumed the proportions of a three-ring circus of turbulent domestic affairs, even to the audience which jammed the courtroom throughout each day.

Testimony in the hearing was concluded shortly after court went into session yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Scarlett was on the stand to refute evidence offered by her young husband during the forenoon session. She renewed her charges of brutality and "duress." The defense, led by Attorney Claude A. Thompson, rested after cross-examining the girl for a few minutes.

Then Attorneys Lewis Shapiro and Alfred Newmeyer for Mrs. Scarlett presented their final argument to the judge.

"I want the court to understand that George Stanton Scarlett 3d has as blue blood in his veins as flows anywhere on the American continent," Thompson said.

He characterized the defendant as a boy from a good Southern home, whose honor and chivalry were inherent.

"Had my client not come to court to contest this annulment he would have been acting as the menial Mrs. Scarlett and her family have suggested he is," thundered Thompson.

Thompson held that there were certain things the equity court could do in annulment hearings and certain things that it could not, and that nothing in the testimony had sustantiated the charge that Scarlett had threatened his bride prior to marriage, or that he had abused her afterward.

Taking the stand in his own behalf yesterday morning, Scarlett blushed, fingered a Bible frequently and flatly denied his wife's charges. Sometimes he glanced over her head to the rear seats of the room, where his aged father sat, intent on the proceedings.

Vessel Lands Rescued Crew Of 33 at Norfolk

Disabled Furness Liner Is Taken in Tow to Bermuda.

By the Associated Press.

Norfolk, Va., Feb. 20.—Thirty-three seamen, taken from the sinking Greek steamer Stephanos Costomenis, were landed here today by their rescue ship, the City of Newport News, while out on the high seas another disabled ship, the Furness liner Nova Scotia, with passengers and crew aboard, was being towed to Bermuda.

The Nova Scotia, with her propeller lost, was taken in tow today by the Eastern Prince, also a Furness liner, some 300 miles from Bermuda.

The Furness office in New York announced the 212 passengers and crew of the New York-bound Nova Scotia were in good spirits and "apparently in no danger." The disabled ship probably will be taken to Hamilton.

The Eastern Prince reached the side of her sister ship during the night, and radioed she was "standing alongside" waiting for daylight to take the Nova Scotia in tow.

The captain and crew of the sunken Greek vessel will leave here tomorrow for New York. The seamen will be repatriated.

The Stephanos Costomenis was abandoned 24 hours after heavy seas opened a 4-inch crack in a hull plate and caused her to take 19 feet of water in her cargo hold.

One of the rescued crew was injured. Nick Kanskis, last man to leave the lifeboats in being taken aboard the City of Newport News, was thrown into the sea and smashed against the rescue ship.

New Appeal Due For Vanderbilt Child's Custody

Gloria's Mother Moves to Carry Her Fight to U. S. Supreme Court.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 20.—Mrs. Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt today carried her fight to the United States Supreme Court to obtain sole custody of her daughter, Gloria, as the child celebrated her twelfth birthday at the Long Island home of her paternal aunt, Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney.

Balked in three previous attempts in New York State courts to win custody of her child, Mrs. Vanderbilt was notified today that the appellate division signed her order to permit the county clerk to unseal the record of the case to certify it for presentation to the court at Washington.

Since November, 1934, when a Supreme Court order decreed that the child was to be the ward of the court, the 12-year-old heiress was placed by law under principal custody of Mrs. Whitney.

Under terms of the order, upheld by the appellate division at Albany, Mrs. Vanderbilt was given custody of her daughter over weekends. She also was granted the right to have the child one month of the summer.

The court records were sealed by Supreme Court Justice John F. Carew when the nature of the testimony became such that he deemed testimony would be private.

Society leaders here and abroad, butlers, maids, relatives of the child and the child herself took the stand in the two-month trial to testify as to Mrs. Vanderbilt's fitness to rear Gloria.

By the court action today, Mrs. Vanderbilt made good her announcement the day after the trial that she would "appeal to every court in the United States and to the highest court" to win back her child.

Extra precautions were taken to guard the child, whose fortune was estimated at more than $3,500,000.

Tale of Finding Paul Redfern Brings Inquiry

U. S., Brazil to Investigate Reporter's Story Denied by Aviator.

By the Associated Press.

Georgetown, British Guiana, Feb. 20.—Another unsupported tale of the finding of Paul Redfern, long-lost aviator, in the jungles of Brazil, brought action by two governments and a denial by one of the purported rescuers today.

Alfred Harred, reporter, declared through his newspaper, Banier, of Paramaribo, Dutch Guiana, that he and Art Williams, former United States Army flier, had found Redfern, crippled, in an Indian village in the Tumuc Humac Mountains.

Williams, who has been making flights into the interior, denied the story, saying: "I do not know Harred and he most certainly did not accompany me on my recent search."

(The State Department at Washington cabled instructions to the American Consul at Port of Spain, Trinidad, to investigate Harred's story. The Brazilian foreign office asked its boundary commission, working in the northeastern jungles, to determine the authenticity of the report that Redfern is alive.)

Williams, who is well known in the Guianas through years of flying his own air service, declared that he went into the interior accompanied by three natives.

"I took two Djukos (Surinam bush Negroes) with me to act as interpreters and a red Indian, who had given us certain new evidence," he said. "We made new contacts with ten new Indian villages and collected a great deal of information.

"The most that was established is that Redfern did not land in that area.

"If I had found Redfern's plane, it would have been a simple matter to take off the identification plate as evidence. Most of the evidence I have is in photographs."

Harred claimed that Redfern, who disappeared in 1927 on an attempt to fly alone from Brunswick, Ga., to Rio de Janeiro, was held in awe by an Indian tribe.

He said that he and Williams reached the tribal village after several days' hike through the jungle from the point where they landed their plane and that they talked to Redfern, but were threatened by 500 natives with poisoned spears when they tried to induce him to leave with them.

They remained in the neighborhood four days, he asserted, but were unable to effect Redfern's escape.

Harred claimed to have been a member of the Dutch section of the international boundary commission which is surveying the juncture of Brazil with the Dutch and British Guianas. Williams has been flying supplies from the coast to the commission for some time.

Williams declared that he did not believe Redfern had been seen by anyone "from outside."

"He cannot come out for the simple reason that he cannot move without food and the Indians cannot bring him out, because they do not know anywhere else but the immediate vicinity of their villages," the former Army flier said.

"The Indians may be hostile, but I do not think they killed him. Indications are also that far from his plane being preserved as something to worship, it was broken up and parts are probably in the huts of medicine men."

Franco Assumes Paraguayan Rule

Asuncion, Paraguay, Feb. 20 (AP).—Col. Rafael Franco, who left Paraguay two weeks ago as a political exile, became President of Paraguay's new provisional government today in an open air ceremony drenched by one of the season's heaviest rains.

He took the oath of office in the middle of a large square, surrounded by soldiers and crowds which cheered continuously.

Wearing civilian clothes, the man who formerly commanded the Chaco war troops, told his audience briefly that he would concentrate on a program for the reconstruction of Paraguay. Then he led his new cabinet afoot to the palace to go to work.

Franco heads a military government under a mandate laid down by revolutionary leaders who conducted the uprising which forced the retirement of President Eusebio Ayala.

'Spell' Blamed As Dead Man's Mirror Sticks

Defies Efforts to Remove It From Hospital Table; Witness Flees.

By the Associated Press.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Feb. 20.—A dozen explanations, scientific and otherwise, were advanced today to account for the strange conduct of a dead man's mirror.

Molecular attraction, chemical or electrical reaction, hypnosis, parlor magic, spirit manifestation, and a "spell," were mentioned by various commentators seeking to explain why the mirror fulfilled the dying prediction of Jeffrey Derosier, 38, that "you won't be able to pick it up."

Whatever the explanation, all witnesses but one were firm in their assertion that for 24 hours after Derosier's death the mirror defied all efforts to remove it from the top of the steel hospital table on which he flung it, and that it yielded at last only when a nurse attacked it with an icepick.

The other witness, Harvey Davenport, ward-mate of Derosier, could not be reached for comment. Fellow citizens of Davenport's home town, Rexton, said he had packed hurriedly and left for "somewhere in the West," to escape "the dead man's spell."

"I tried to remove the mirror with my hands, and it wouldn't budge," said Dr. F. J. Maloney, Derosier's physician. "The mirror was stuck as he forecast."

Einar W. Jorgenson, hospital bookkeeper, said he had tried every method he could think of before the nurse used the icepick. Several nurses and patients, including Lewis Descheneau, confirmed his statement.

After looking at his face in the glass Derosier tossed it on the table with the statement he was dying, Descheneau related.

"He asked Davenport to give him the mirror again. As Davenport reached for it, Derosier told him 'you won't be able to pick it up from the table.' Davenport seemed frozen to the spot. Derosier died right away," Descheneau said.

"Then Davenport and the others tried and tried to take the glass from the table. It wouldn't move."

Several scientists said the surfaces of the mirror and the table might have been smooth enough to create a vacuum between them, or possibly a molecular attraction.

President's Farm Tax Plan

If a tax bill were brought here for consideration next week?" Bankhead retorted.

"I should be delighted," said Treadway. "It would be a harbinger to adjournment, at least."

Off the floor, Bankhead later told reporters he expected the Ways and Means Committee would receive the Administration's recommendations on taxes after the President returns from Hyde Park. Present plans are for him to leave for Philadelphia tomorrow, and return to Washington, via Hyde Park, by next Friday. Bankhead said his belief was that the revenue proposals would approximate the cost of the farm program—between $440,000,000 and $500,000,000.

This report coincided with another improvement in monthly revenue receipts by the Treasury. January collections increased $38,626,126 over January, 1935, but cessation of processing taxes as a result of AAA's invalidation brought a net drop of $10,000,000. In one Treasury quarter it was forecast that a 25 per cent increase in income tax collections will be shown next month, completing the calendar year's first quarter. They based this estimate on business gains.

Some Democratic members of Congress have urged that the President hold up his tax program until first quarter returns are in, hoping a substantial pick-up might make immediate enactment of new tax legislation unnecessary. Taxation is not a popular subject in Congress during an election year.

Revenue and relief measures will be the only major questions left pending, once the farm bill is passed, and this narrowing of the legislative slate has led to forecasts of adjournment by April 15. A lively and probably lengthy fight is in prospect on both issues, however, with Senate liberals seeking to steepen the income tax, and block cuts in relief appropriations.

Senator Robert M. La Follette, jr. (Progressive), Wisconsin, who last session vainly attempted to broaden the income tax base, said yesterday he will revive his efforts this session if new taxes are proposed.

"If the House passes a tax bill, I will propose in the Senate amendments along the lines suggested by me last session," said the Wisconsin Progressive. "They will include a broader income tax base, and increases in the normal and surtax rates."

La Follette also disclosed he has called on the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue for data on the recent revenue pick-up.

Meanwhile, on motion of Chairman Marvin Jones of the House Agriculture Committee, the House substituted his committee's own farm bill for the measure which passed the Senate, and limited annual expenditures under it to $500,000,000. An adjournment was taken until today, when Representative John W. McCormack (Democrat), of Massachusetts, introduced an amendment to insure fair prices to consumers. A similar amendment was defeated in the Senate.

Among the many amendments that will be voted on today are several proposals by members from dairy and livestock districts to prohibit diversion to pasturage and lands taken out of production.

In the Senate, Arthur Capper (Republican), Kansas, friend of Gov. Alf Landon, of Kansas, introduced a tariff-equalization bill similar to one put forward in the House by Representative Clifford R. Hope (Republican), Kansas, also a friend of Gov. Landon. He proposed it as an addition to, not a substitute for, the Administration's bill, and said it was "constitutional and economically justifiable."

In the House, Representative Hope indicated he would vote for the Administration's bill, not believing the time propitious as yet for pressing his own plan to pay tariff-equalizing subsidies to producers of surplus farm crops.

"There are some of us," he said, "who believe that there are other and better methods of handling the situation, but does the fear of improper administration justify those of us who want to see something done for agriculture in voting against the bill? I think not."

Although Hope has never claimed Landon support for his own bill, he told the House yesterday that "Gov. Landon has included soil conservation as one of the chief means by which he would rehabilitate agriculture."

As Wallace's report on tax refunds was forwarded to Norris, Representative Treadway renewed his attack in the House on the Secretary of Agriculture, whom he recently said should be impeached for his "refund steal" charge.

"This bill (AAA substitute) amounts to taking the word of the Secretary of Agriculture, who has been a failure in his position, to spend $500,000,000 as he sees fit," said Treadway. "I can just see these funds being distributed in connection with the approaching elections."

The findings of Bean, submitted to Norris by Wallace, declared that the $300,000,000 he said was refunded to processors, included $180,000,000 released as a result of Supreme Court action, and more than $10,000,000 unpaid as a result of delinquencies.

Of the total amount outstanding, 90 per cent is in the hands of three groups of processors, Bean said, cotton manufacturers, wheat flour millers and hog packers. Unpaid cotton processing taxes were estimated at $97,000,000; hog processing taxes, $98,000,000, and wheat taxes, $80,000,000.

Bean said the impounded and other outstanding cotton processing taxes of $97,000,000 compare with a $31,000,000 net income for 1933; $22,000,000 for 1929, and with about an average of $35,000,000 for the three years 1927-28-29. Impounded cotton processing taxes for the last half of 1935, he said, are nearly four and one-half times the profit of 1929, and three times as great as the 1927-29 profits.

Concerning wheat, Bean said:

"The impounded and other unpaid wheat processing taxes amount to $80,000,000. Compared with the net profit of $20,000,000 in 1933, they are four times as great. Compared with the 1929 profits of $32,000,000, they are nearly two and one-half times as great, and compared with the 1927-29 net profits of $34,000,000, the outstanding wheat taxes are also about two and one-half times as great."

About the packer refunds, Bean had this to say:

"The impounded and other outstanding hog processing taxes of $98,000,000 are about seven and one-half times as great as the 1933 profits, about three and one-half times as great as the 1929 profits, and about four times as great as the average net profits of 1927-1929. Assuming that on the average about half of the packers' net income is derived from hog operations, these taxes are probably about 15 times the profits from hogs of 1933, seven times the hog profits of 1929 and eight times the hog profits of 1927-1929."

Bean charged that "the margins taken by processors for converting hogs, wheat and cotton into pork, flour and cotton goods, respectively, also indicate how the processing taxes have been collected by the processors from consumers or producers with the original intent of paying them into the United States Treasury without depleting their own profit accounts."

NOT long ago I was like some friends I have...low in spirits... run-down...out of sorts...tired easily and looked terrible. I knew I had no serious organic trouble so I reasoned sensibly...as my experience has since proven...that work, worry, colds and whatnot had just worn me down.

The confidence mother has always had in S.S.S. Tonic...which is still her stand-by when she feels run-down...convinced me I ought to try this Treatment...I started a course. The color began to come back to my skin...I felt better...I did not tire easily and soon I felt that those red-blood-cells were back to so-called fighting strength...it is great to feel strong again and like my old self.

Insist on S.S.S. Tonic in the blood-red Cellophane-wrapped package...the big 20-oz. size is sufficient for two weeks' treatment...it's more economical, too.
